World Bank calls for Myanmar's Ease of Doing Business reform

May Thet Hnin

THE World Bank has called for reforms in the business sector for Myanmar to improve its Ease of Doing Business ranking, said U Aung Htoo, Deputy Minister for Commerce.

The suggestions made by the World Bank include updating laws, adopting a legal framework for electronic transactions, conducting legislation related to construction permits, implementing a new unifying land law, drawing up a secured transaction law, enacting a tax administration procedure act, amending the customs law, implementing online registrations of businesses through an e-government framework, installing electronic system for tax application and payment, implementing a single window system for import and export businesses, ensuring transparency in government procedures and effective communication between government and entrepreneurs, allotting a unit business identifier, that is a single number for tax and company licences, and putting in place a machinery for public announcements.

The projects must be implemented as short-term, mid-term and long-term plans, he said.

Some of the projects have already been implemented by the government, the deputy minister said.

"The New Company Act has already been amended. The YCDC Law and Municipal Act have also been enacted. We are planning to hold discussions with the related ministry over the suggestion of having the same number for export/import and company licences," U Aung Htoo said.

The Ease of Doing Business reforms will support private sector development, as well as attract foreign direct investments.

A survey conducted last year to determine the Ease of Doing Business rank noted that respondents gave speculative answers and lacked knowledge about the government's reform process and performance. Therefore this year, the ministries have coordinated with each other over answering the survey questions, as well as coordinated with other respondents who are representatives of private companies, lawyer organisations and accounting groups. Currently, the country is ranked 172 out of 190 countries in the Ease of Doing Business index. It lags behind other countries in the ASEAN region. The government is trying to achieve a rank of 99 by 2020, aiming to rise by 24 spots per year on average.

By 2020, the ministry has planned to form support groups to discuss the survey answers, as well as set up a website to share information about the economic reforms, U Aung Htoo said. ■

Maritime trade up by $352 million this April

THE external trade value via sea routes between Myanmar and its international trade partners topped US$1.594 billion over the first 27 days of this transitional fiscal year, the Ministry of Commerce reported.

The total value of maritime trade between 1 and 27 April this year included $501 million in exports and $1.093 billion in imports. During the same period, Myanmar also exported $282 million worth of commodities to its neighbouring countries through its borders. Its border imports were valued at $183 million.

According to the ministry, the country's non-border trade, as of 27 April, increased in value by $352 million than last year, while its border trade value increased by $74 million.

The current export/import figures reached $2.06 billion. This time last April, the value of trade carried out through the country's border and non-borders was less than $2 billion.

Myanmar's major import items are divided into three groups — capital goods, intermediate goods and consumer goods. The country primarily exports six groups of commodities, such as agriculture products, animal and fisheries products, forest products and manufacturing goods.

Concerted efforts have been made by the government to decrease the trade deficit by reducing imported commodities, such as luxury goods. — Shwe Khine ■

Agricultural exports decrease slightly this FY

MYANMAR exported agricultural goods worth US$204.5 million this April, recording a slight decrease in value by $10.9 million than last April, according to the latest report of the commerce ministry.

Last April, agricultural exports were worth $215.5 million.

Myanmar's major agricultural exports include beans and pulses, rice, melons, mangoes, coffee beans, avocado and other fruits and vegetables, as well as herbal plants and other marketable items.

Over the first 27 days of the current transitional financial period, the country sold domestically-produced goods such as agricultural goods, animal products, aquaculture products, minerals, forest products, manufactured goods and other miscellaneous items, earning $784.6 million, registering an increase in value by $150 million as against the same period last year.

Myanmar conducts trade with ASEAN member countries, East Asian nations, some European states and African states, mainly through sea routes.

Despite an increase in the value of exports, Myanmar is facing a yearly trade deficit because the country's imports exceed its exports. The government is making sustained efforts to boost the country's exports in each sector, as part of its economic development plan. — Swe Nyein ■

Expect rainfall, thundershowers in Nay Pyi Taw, Yangon and Mandalay

Thunderstorms will continue to be felt in southern Myanmar areas, and rainfall or thundershowers will be fairly widespread in Nay Pyi Taw, widespread in the Yangon region and scattered in the Mandalay Region in the next two days, as clouds will be few over Central Bay and partly cloudy to cloudy over the Andaman Sea and elsewhere over the Bay of Bengal, according to Myanmar Daily weather report issued by the Department of Meteorology and Hydrology yesterday.

The forecast for Nay Pyi Taw, Mandalay and neighbouring arreas for today is isolated rain or thundershowers, and the degree of certainty is 80 per cent, whereas one or two rainfall or thundershowers will be experienced in Yangon and neighbouring areas, with the degree of certainty being 80 per cent. Seas will be slight to moderate in Myanmar waters. The height of the waves will be some 3 to 5 feet off and along Myanmar coast.—GNLM

We invite the sincere cooperation of Bangladesh to start repatriation

WHILE Myanmar has insisted that it is ready to begin the repatriation process to accept the verified displaced people from Bangladesh, it is very upsetting to hear that the Prime Minister of Bangladesh called on the Organization of Islamic Cooperation (OIC) to put pressure on Myanmar to take back the displaced people and ensure their rights and security.

The repatriation forms were to be completed in accordance with the agreement between the two countries. If so, why did Bangladesh fail to fill in the forms of more than 8,000 people? The forms received by Myanmar were not the ones agreed upon by both countries. What came as a complete surprise to Myanmar is that the Bangladeshi Foreign Minister did not know that the forms were not completed in accord with the bilateral agreement until he met with a Myanmar delegation led by the Union Minister for Social Welfare, Relief and Resettlement in mid-April.

The displaced people did not produce signed documents stating they were returning of their own free will, and their fingerprints and individual photographs were not included in the documents sent to Myanmar.

This shows that the actions of the Bangladeshi government are not workable for the repatriation process.

We reject the OIC meeting's Dhaka Declaration as it lacks balance and fairness, and fails to denounce the brutal attacks of the terrorist group, the Arakan Rohingya Salvation Army (ARSA), which triggered the humanitarian situation unfolding today.

Myanmar categorically rejects the irresponsible labelling of "ethnic cleansing" or "State-backed violence" to describe events in Rakhine State. More than 50 per cent of the Muslim community, which represents the majority in Maungdaw region, have remained in their villages.

The term genocide should not be used in the case of Myanmar, nor in other countries, without clear evidence.

We should note that the problems in Rakhine State are long-standing, complicated and sensitive. For Myanmar there are many arduous tasks ahead of us, and this may be considered to be just the beginning of a long journey to bring peace and prosperity to Rakhine State.

Our main strength is cooperation. Rehabilitation is a social and political need.

There is motto which goes: Winning the peace is harder than winning the war.

We would like to urge Bangladesh to take all necessary steps to help the repatriation process in accordance with the bilateral agreement as we are ready to facilitate the dignified return of the displaced persons from Rakhine.

Keeping the Inya Lake in an original state of preservation

By Tin Win Lay
(Kyimyindaing)

THESE days, there is no reason why I was humming softly to myself: a song on a university girl student by Ko Min Naung. The proximity of the Yangon University to the Inya Lake has created a famous location for romance and coming to my mind the first days of student life in the University.

But Yangon Region Hluttaw Representative Daw Khine Mar Htay from Hlaing Constituency No. 2 raised a query about the maintenance of Inya Lake: "Are there any plans of maintaining the original state of preservation for the Inya Lake not only for the Yangonites but for foreign tourists?" Again on 5 May, Mayangon Constituency No.1 Hluttaw Representative U Yan Shin also raised some questions about hundreds of rat holes and leftover foods thrown into the Lake on the east side facing the Myanmar Plaza.

There are two famous lakes in Yangon: the Kandawgyi and the Inya Lakes, with latter roughly five times larger than the former. With long historical backgrounds of the two lakes, only the Inya Lake has created a lot of love stories among the university students due to its proximity to the University Campus.

During the heyday of the University of Yangon, there was a little bit of maintenance of the lake. Walking on the lanes on the bank, students used to be at a popular rendezvous at the roadside shops where fried fruit and vegetables were available. Now these places have become an area of scenic beauty: shady trees with beautiful red flowers have grown on both sides of the bank for holidaymakers. From dawn till dusk, more and more restaurants and shops have sprouted in recent years to sell food and drinks.

Beautification of the Lake

Yangon Major U Maung Maung Soe responded to the queries that arrangements and plans are being carried out for beautification and upgrading of the lake for the Yangonites as well as for foreign tourists. For beautification purposes, rubbish are being salvaged from the lake daily; silt has been removed with the help of suction pumps; and floodgates are put in places to control the level of the water in the lake. Silt has been salvaged from the inlet pipes of Kokkine and Inya Myaing to raise the level of water up to 47' to 48' by installation of 12 floodgates. For strength and cleanliness of the lake bank on the side of the Pyay Road, big concrete slabs were put in place for the length of 2350 pieces and 2015, silt-sieve pool and 170-foot long embankment of polluted water were also constructed.

Keeping Inya waters clean

In 2017, some experts from the Irrigation and Water Management Department investigated the strength of the bank on the side of Pyay Road. In order to the waters clean, nearby polluted water, rubbish and dirty water from restaurants have been purified or channeled into the drains beside the Inya Road at the back of the Convocation Hall. On the side of Yangon Sailing Club, the letout of polluted water through the floodgate is released 10 feet above the surface of the water. In the same way, polluted water from the restaurants of Myak-yuntha side is released in the same manner, keeping the water in the lake purified and clean.

Upon the scenic beauty of the Lake, an officer-in-charge U Zaw Win Htun said: On the Pyay Road, the Inya Lake is connected with townships of Kamayut and Hlaing with the White Bridge in the middle. When asked about hundreds of rat holes, he pointed out at the reckless behavior of holidaymakers; they throw away leftover foods without taking anything into consideration. He continued to point out these animals live on these foods by making holes in the ground. These holes have been filled with sand, broken bricks and mud on a daily basis. The owners of restaurants are strongly urged not to let the polluted water flow into the Lake; systematic collections of rubbish are closely watched; collected rain water should be released through the drains into the White Bridge creek.

Daily cleanliness

Those who walk on the bank for relaxation are reminded to throw the rubbish into the dustbins; 108 trashcans are already put in place on the Pyay Road side with 111 garbage cans on the side of Kaba Aye Road.

These dustbins are cleaned by a workforce of 60 employees on a daily basis. The bank on the side of Pyay Road is long but beautiful with a park on Inya Road meticulously planned for beautification. Even if there are no fences or barriers near the Lake, the path on the bank is hugely popular for walkers under the shady trees in the morning.

Security for walkers

For the security of those who spend a few hours of relaxation, installation of 34 CCTV are already carried out on the Pyay side and with 39 CCTV on the Kaba Aye side. The idea is to record all events and accidents occurred near the lake and it is as well meant to make the images of the lake better. Park benches were built on the bank by some business companies; some benches are removed to make ways for fun seekers. Arrangements are urgently made not only for Yangonites but for pleasure-seeking foreign tourists as well. The passage ways to the bank and restaurants are meticulously paved under the shady trees.

Reckless throwing of rubbish

Billboards with notices are erected near the lake to abide by walkers as well as fun seekers. These people are believed to have thrown rubbish recklessly, making a lot of rat holes in the grass on the ground. If foreign tourists happen to find these holes, we may get shy and embarrassed. Eradication of these rodents is being supervised with the help of Animals and Slaughterhouse Department, according to U Zaw Lin Htun. More than three hundred thousand rats were eliminated in 2016 and more than that number in 2017, according to an official.

The Inya Lake is 1800 feet long on the Pyay Road side and can hold 4 trillion gallons of water according to an expert. It would be of great concern to local people if the strength of the bank becomes weakened by rat holes in the grass on the ground. As the lake has been a symbol of historic and natural beauty of Yangon, the maintenance of the Lake should be carried out by active cooperation and participation of people from all walks of life. ■

Closing the gaps in economic statistics for sustainable development

Asia-Pacific Economic Statistics Week 2018

THE 2018 Asia-Pacific Economic Statistics Week (APES) closed today in Bangkok with a strong focus on strengthening the capability of Member States to produce core economic statistics and improve monitoring of the Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs).

Senior economic statisticians from statistical offices and central banks of countries in the region, as well as international development experts gathered at the United Nations Economic and Social Commission for Asia and the Pacific (ESCAP) in Bangkok for the four-day forum to exchange research priorities and best practices, and help close the data gaps for sustainable development.

Economic statistics are specifically required for almost half the current indicators in the global monitoring framework for the SDGs, yet many countries continue to struggle with getting the basics right such as population and economic statistics. Therefore, there is an urgent need to improve data collection in order to present a complete picture of the region's development.

"It is critical that governments invest in national statistical systems to address monitoring needs of the SDGs," said UN Under-Secretary-General and Executive Secretary of ESCAP Dr. Shamshad Akhtar. "The support that different development partners give to advance statistical capacity development is crucial to promote evidence based policy making for the benefit of the regions' most vulnerable populations."

The forum included a two-day seminar, which covered big data, modern technologies for production of economics statistics, administrative data, System of National Accounts, Islamic finance, natural resources and communication, and the use of statistics. The seminar was held back to back with the fifth meeting of the Steering Group for the Regional Programme on Economic Statistics, where delegates outlined research priorities for the region such as the digital and creative economy.

Participants decided on priority topics for collaboration including the use of big data technologies and national accounts statistics. The forum also provided a platform to expand the knowledge repository of national studies to improve data collection.

APES was established in 2016, within the Regional Programme on Economic Statistics, to provide substantive, consistent support to countries to ensure effective production and dissemination of basic economic statistics, and share national research studies across the region.—ESCAP News ■

Protest lodged against Bangladesh for construction of fortifications

MYANMAR has summoned the Bangladeshi Ambassador to lodge a formal protest against the construction of fortifications, such as sandbagged with overhead covers and bunkers on the Bangladesh side of the border, in violation of the terms described in the bilateral border agreement.

From Taungbro Village in Bangladesh facing border posts 34 and 35 near Rakhine State, Maungtau Township, Taung Pyo Town to Lower Bashbari Village, the No. 34 BGB battalion had constructed seven fortifications — two sandbagged defensive position with overhead cover, three sandbagged/earth defensive position with overhead cover, one earth bunker and one concrete bunker, which were then manned by BGB troops day and night.

Furthermore, the No. 34 BGB battalion installed four CCTV cameras and 10 security solar lamps on the Bangladesh side of the border between the two countries on 6 and 7 March, and 9 and 10 March, respectively.

Union Minister U Kyaw Tin summoned Bangladesh Ambassador to Myanmar Mr. Majurul Karim Khan Chowdhury to demand that Bangladesh remove the installations constructed in violation of the bilateral border agreement, stop supporting the construction of houses and buildings in the no-construction zone on the Myanmar side of the border line, and cooperate in removing displaced persons living there illegally. Myanmar informed him about 368 Rakhine, Mro, Khami and Daingnet peoples thought to be Bangladesh nationals who had entered Myanmar in the past few months.

Their nationalities will be assessed, and they will be sent back to their places of origin in Bangladesh, as per their wishes as soon as possible, he said.

The Union Minister then reiterated the readiness of Myanmar to receive the displaced persons from Rakhine State, according to the bilateral agreement between the governments of Myanmar and Bangladesh before the monsoon.

The Union Minister also urged cooperation from the Bangladesh side for the speedy repatriation of some 1,200 Hindus and Muslims in a list provided by Myanmar and 929 persons already assessed by Myanmar from a list provided by Bangladesh.

Furthermore, the Ambassador was told to provide the list of displaced persons who wanted to return through the forms prescribed in the agreed physical arrangement for receiving returnees, resolve the matter of displaced persons and other bilateral matters through bilateral discussion with neighbourly spirit. — Myanmar News Agency ■

We are responsible for safety for the international aid groups when they go to the armed conflict areas. It is not true that we denied them to go the conflict areas: Kachin State Chief Minister

Interview with authorities in Kachin State regarding armed conflicts

By: Ye Khaung Nyunt

A media delegation led by Chief Editor U Tha Sein of the Myanmar News Agency (External) visited the conflict areas in Kachin State from 9 to 11 May.

During the three-day visit, the delegation visited churches where displaced people, who fled their homes amid armed conflicts, were sheltering and Awng Lawt area, where KIA's brigade-2 was established, and is currently under control by the Tatmadaw.

The journalists interviewed Chief Minister of Kachin State Dr. Khat Aung, Kachin State Security and Border Affairs Col Thura Myo Tin, Kachin State Advocate General U Disinyal, Chairman of Kachin State Red Cross Supervisory Committee U Ge Nas, and officials.

Following is the interview with Kachin State Chief Minister Dr. Khat Aung.

Q: Is it correct that Kachin State Government denied the offers by international communities to give assistance to Kachin State?

Chief Minister: After co-ordination with the Northern Command, we permitted rescue groups depending on the security situation to go to the areas where the armed conflicts happened between the Tatmadaw and KIA. Some asked permission from the Kachin State Government to go to the areas. There are landmines in the conflict areas. We are responsible for safety for the international aid groups when they go to the armed conflict areas. It is not true that we denied them to go the conflict areas.

Q: Can you say that there is no people who are trapped amid armed conflicts?

Chief Minister: We can not say that there is no people who are trapped amid armed conflicts. Youths staged protests here recently demanding to rescue people trapped in the conflict areas. We have the same ambition with the youths. So, we asked them to give information on locations where the people are believed to be trapped, who needs health care services, etc. We, the Kachin State Government, will help them, rescue them by ourselves or by co-ordination with the Tatmadaw. Only when we hear the voices of the people, we can help them. We have formed committees to rescue and to aid the displaced people. We are ready to give our help to the people at the state, district and town levels.

Q: There are accusations. People are anxious. Can we say that there are political reason behind that. How is your government planning to return the situation into normalcy?

A: Maybe there are political grounds. The main reason is lack of peace here. We all must work together to achieve peace in Kachin State.

Q: Some said that residents are trapped in armed conflicts areas. I think the General Administration Department have the list of the people trapped in the conflict areas. What is the difference between the number of people who fled their homes and who were trapped in the conflict areas?

A: Some areas are within the reach of our administration, but some are not. For example, Awng Lawt area where the media delegation visited yesterday was not within our administration. First, we got the information that about 160 people were trapped in the Manwae. Of them, 30 have no household document. Kachin State Government have made arrangements to grant household documents to them. You can get the detailed information from the Director of the Immigration and Population Department and Kachin State Security and Border Affairs Minister.

Q: Is it correct that the Kachin State Government sent the displaced people to their relatives' homes, not to the IDP camps? How about your opinion on the information that IDP camp is not allowed to be established in Tanai?

A: We transported them to their relatives' homes on their own volition. The real situation is that they sheltered at monasteries and churches temporarily due to security concern. Now, IDP camps have been established and the Union Government and the Kachin State Government have provided assistance to them. NGOs and INGOs are also giving assistance to them.

Q: Kachin State Government said it is ready to rescue the people who are trapped once it gets the information. How can you carry out the rescue operation?

Kachin State Security and Border Affairs Minister: Officials of the Tatmadaw have promised that they will assist in rescuing the people who are trapped in the conflicts and will transport them to safe place. If the people need urgent medical care, the Tatmadaw will move them by helicopter. It depends on the choice of the people. Regarding the IDP camps, there are about 100 IDP camps in the government areas and non-government areas. This is not a good sign. We sent the people from Manwei to the relatives' houses on their own volition. They want to return home but they don't due to some pressure on them, I think.

Kachin State Social Affairs Minister: First, we moved the people from Manwei to Karmai. First, we sent the red cross members to the area and they got the list of people who want to stay at their relatives' homes. You can check that list from the U Gae Nas, Chairman of Kachin State Red Cross Supervisory Committee.

U Gae Nas, Chairman of Kachin State Red Cross Supervisory Committee: We sent the list of 28 households to the Kachin State Government. We, red cross members, were also together with the Kachin State Government when they transported the displaced people to the relatives' homes.

Q: Could please tell the messages from the State Counsellor for the current situation here?

Chief Minister: First priority is the prevalence of peace and the second is the rule of law in Kachin state. The Rule of Law includes elimination of drugs. But, we can not work in full swing for the drug elimination here as we still not yet achieve peace. The next step is the social economic development. The whole country is facing the peace problem. If we have strong desire for peace, we can achieve it. Thank You. ■

Historic Trump-Kim summit set for 12 June in Singapore

WASHINGTON—Donald Trump on Thursday revealed his historic summit with Kim Jong Un — the first-ever between a sitting US president and a North Korean leader— will take place in Singapore on 12 June.

The location and date of the landmark meeting were announced in a presidential tweet just hours after Trump welcomed to the United States three American prisoners released by Pyongyang.

“We will both try to make it a very special moment for World Peace!” Trump wrote.

The talks, which are expected to last one day, are set to focus on North Korea’s rapidly advancing nuclear and ballistic weapons programs.

“I think it will be a big success,” Trump said as he boarded Air Force One, on his way to a political rally in Indiana.

US officials said the release of Americans Kim Hak-song, Tony Kim and Kim Dong-chul removed a major obstacle to the summit, providing Trump with some tangible evidence that his twin-track policy of engagement and “maximum pressure” was working.

“We’re not under any illusions about who these people are. We know who we are dealing with here,” said Victoria Coates, of the National Security Council.

“But we got, up front,

our people home.”

Neutral setting

The United States and North Korea are technically still at war — a stop-gap armistice ended the brutal three-year Korean war in 1953 and around 30,000 American troops remain in neighboring South Korea, which the US supported in the conflict.

Singapore will provide a neutral backdrop for the summit, avoiding some of the security and political challenges associated with a meeting in the Demilitarized Zone that separates North and South Korea.

The Southeast Asia city state has long acted as a bridge between the United States and China, with successive prime ministers offering Oval Office occupants their cherished geopolitical counsel.

When Trump and Kim do sit down a month from now, the two relatively untested leaders will be presented with a puzzle that has stymied seasoned diplomats for decades.

A series of US administrations have sent envoys, both official and unofficial, to Pyongyang in the hope of stopping North Korea’s provocative nuclear weapons program.

Former presidents

Bill Clinton and Jimmy Carter visited after leaving office, multiple rounds of non-proliferation talks have taken place, and a deal was even signed in 1994.

But despite the optimism of that moment, all efforts to limit North Korea’s nuclear program have, to date, failed. And more than two decades and multiple provocative weapons tests after the last accord, the threat from Pyongyang has only grown.

The country is now believed to be on the cusp of developing an intercontinental ballistic missile that could deliver a nuclear warhead to the US mainland.—AFP ■

Indonesian volcano erupts, sparking evacuations

JAKARTA (INDONESIA) — Indonesian villagers living in the shadow of one of the world’s most active volcanoes fled to safety Friday as Mount Merapi erupted, sending a cascade of ash and smoke some 5,000 metres (16,400 feet) into the sky.

The government ordered residents living within a five-kilometre (three-mile) radius of the crater on Java island to leave as ash covered surrounding communities and even reached parts of Yogyakarta, Indonesia’s cultural capital some 30 kilometres away.

Officials have shuttered the city’s international airport with two dozen flights cancelled following the eruption, which began around 7:30 am (1230 GMT). It was not clear how many residents living around Merapi had left for local shelters, but around 12,000 people live in its immediate vicinity. “Everybody ran here immediately,” resident Familia Ekawati said from a shelter, adding that there was little warning of the blast before it happened. “There was no sign it would be erupting.” Some 120 people who were hiking on the mountain when the eruption happened are safe, the government said. Merapi previously erupted in 2010, killing more than 300 people and forcing 280,000 to flee, in what is considered its most powerful eruption since 1930. Despite Friday’s evacuations, officials played down the danger, saying it was a phreatic eruption, which happens when magma heats up ground water, building up pressure inside the crater. “This kind of eruption is not dangerous and could happen anytime to an active volcano,” national disaster agency spokesman Sutopo Purwo Nugroho said in a statement. “There have not been any more eruptions (since this morning).” The volcano’s alert status has not been raised. The Southeast Asian archipelago nation of more than 17,000 islands and islets — and nearly 130 active volcanoes — is situated on the Pacific “Ring of Fire”, a vast zone of geological instability where the collision of tectonic plates causes frequent quakes and major volcanic activity.—AFP ■

More than 12,000 people live in the immediate vicinity of Mount Merapi, one of the world’s most active volcanoes.

Age cannot wither Brazilian seniors in beauty contest

SAO PAULO (BRAZIL)— Brazilian Rosalia Pereira had two reasons to celebrate Thursday: her miraculously rekindled true love 40 years to the day after their first date and being crowned Sao Paulo's senior beauty queen.

"Today is even more special because of this," the 62-year-old said after winning the beauty contest, which aims to give the elderly a bit of fun just before Brazilian Mother's Day on Sunday.

"To participate, to have the courage to participate, is proof that the elderly today are active and this is very good, because it boosts everyone's confidence," Pereira told AFP.

Now in its 15th year, the contest is run by a community center for the elderly in the northeast of the city.

"This is part of social inclusion, getting people out of their houses," said Nilton da Silva Guedes, social integration director at the center, known as the Paulista Institute of Geriatrics and Gerontology.

"There's a different world, people of the same age range who maybe have similar problems, people who can talk or exchange ideas, understand each other, and see things aren't that bad," he said.

Organizers whittled down more than 100 initial contestants to 25 finalists.

On the day of the final, hopeful beauties aged between 62 and 77 paraded before a loud audience, mostly consisting of other elderly -- though not always.

"That's my mother!" one younger woman shouted, pointing proudly at the stage.

Up for grabs were titles in five other categories: Miss Timidity, Miss Elegance, Miss Smile, Miss Congeniality and Miss Beauty.

The previous editions' winners hung the sashes around their successors' shoulders. Last year's Miss Beauty 2017 appraised the new title-holder critically before conceding the sash, and outgoing beauty queen Aureluc Gastao seemed to need a little persuasion to surrender her crown.

Mother-of-two Pereira, a commercial manager, is no stranger to the catwalk, having won another title in her suburb in 2016.

But what is beauty without love? In this, Pereira says she has been the biggest winner of all.

Her greatest achievement, she says, was "rediscovering the big love of my life."

Feel-good Egyptian leper film charms Cannes

CANNES (FRANCE) —First-time director A.B. Shawky said Thursday that piecing together financing for a feel-good road movie about an Egyptian leper and his orphan friend nicknamed Obama was the least of his troubles getting his film to Cannes.

The newcomer is going toe-to-toe with Spike Lee, his former professor, and Jean-Luc Godard for the coveted Palme d'Or at the world's premier film festival with his debut feature "Yomeddine".

The touching, upbeat picture tells the story of Beshay, who lives in a leper colony north of Cairo, and Obama, who joins him on a cross-country trek after he escapes his overcrowded orphanage.

"It's my first film so obviously I didn't have any record to fall back when I go to financiers but also I had non-actors who weren't able to read and the main actor also had leprosy," said the Egyptian-Austrian director, who at 32 is the youngest in the competition.

On top of that came Egypt's notorious red tape — the crew had to wait a month and a half just for one permit, for a key scene on a train.

- 'Last of their kind' - Shawky found his lead actor Rady Gamal at the Abu Zaabal Leper Colony, where he made a short documentary in 2008, and said he was taken with the natural charisma behind his heavily scarred face and disfigured limbs.

"When you live in a secluded leper colony, you're not used to people staring at you all the time and now you have stand in front of a camera and have 60 people (on the crew) staring at you all day," he said.

"But by the end of the shoot he was the star -- everybody loved him, he cracks jokes all the time."

Shawky said advances in treatment of leprosy meant its devastating effects may make his film a historical relic in just a few decades.

"The older generation (such as Gamal) that contracted the disease before they came up with a cure for it in the 1980s are basically the last of their kind," he said. As for the Nubian boy nicknamed Obama, Shawky said he didn't aim to get into US politics but rather show the global reach of cultural touchstones.—AFP ■

Meghan unveiled at London waxwork museum

LONDON—A waxwork of Meghan Markle wearing a replica of her diamond engagement ring was unveiled on Wednesday at London's Madame Tussauds museum, less than two weeks before her wedding to Prince Harry.

"Excitement ahead of the royal wedding is reaching fever pitch and we have been inundated with questions about when people can finally meet Their Royal Likenesses," general manager Edward Fuller said.

The likeness of the US former television actress is in a green dress like the one she wore when the couple, who are getting married at Windsor Castle on 19 May, announced their engagement in November.

"They take about six months to make. We had to speed up a little because obviously once the engagement was announced we were off and running," Stephen Mansfield, the principal sculptor, told AFP. Asked if Harry and Meghan had posed for the sculptures, he said: "As you can imagine they've got one or two other things on their minds currently, so we were able to create the figures using techniques that we're built up over the years".

Harry's figure, which was originally created to mark the royal's 30th birthday, has been updated for the occasion with the ginger beard he currently sports.

"The massive challenge in this case was that there would be a huge expectation and people interested to see how our figures would look," Mansfield said.

The waxworks will go on public show the day before the wedding. On the day, the museum said it will offer free entry to guests named Meghan or Harry.—AFP ■

US museum explores Louise Bourgeois, beyond the spiders

POTOMAC (UNITED STATES) — There's something deeply unsettling about navigating through the latest Louise Bourgeois exhibition, an experience that feels like trespassing in the late French-American artist's psyche.

A five-decade survey that opened Thursday at the private Glenstone museum in the town of Potomac, Maryland outside Washington explores the breadth of deeply autobiographical, sexually-charged creations by this prolific artist, best known for her giant metal spider sculptures displayed around the world.

Traumatized as a child by her philandering father's infidelities, including with her nanny, Bourgeois took a revenge of sorts with "The Destruction of the Father" (1974), her first large-scale installation.

A red-lit room lined in soft fabric suggests a womb-like bedroom/dining room, but also a crime scene.

Abstract blobs represent children who have rebelled against their overbearing father; murdered him and eaten him up, his body reduced to lamb shoulders and chicken legs cast in soft plaster.

"So he was liquidated... the same way he had liquidated his children," Bourgeois once said about the piece.

Nothing surprising, really, for someone who said "art is a guarantee of sanity."

The ferocious aspects of Bourgeois's femininity are on display in an untitled piece from 1996 that's a macabre take on a mobile or clothing tree, with fine undergarments hanging from huge bones.

Jerry Gorovoy, Bourgeois's longtime assistant who now leads the Easton Foundation dedicated to her life and work, recalled that the artist kept most of her old clothes -- including from her childhood -- and used them for her creations.

"Ode a la Bievre" (2002), an embroidered book made of fabric pieces, pays tribute to the tannin-rich river that ran near the Bourgeois family's tapestry restoration workshop.

In "Cell (Choisy)" (1990-1993), Bourgeois placed a guillotine in front of a reproduction of her childhood home in hollow flesh-colored marble inside a metal enclosure lined with knocked out windows.

There are architectural qualities to "He Disappeared into Complete Silence," a book of engravings and letterpress text Bourgeois first made in 1947, here in an edition she reworked through 2005.

Various figures are represented as large, inhuman structures in a world where communication is often problematic.

On one page, a tall figure holds up a smaller one. Bourgeois's accompanying parable: "Once a man was angry at his wife, he cut her into small pieces, made a stew of her. Then he telephoned to his friends and asked them for a cocktail-and-stew party. They all came and had a good time."

'Unparalleled'

Glenstone founders Mitch and Emily Rales amassed this varied assemblage of the artist's works over just a few years.

Having an in-house collection has its advantages. Totem-like wood structures were drilled directly into the floor as they were originally intended to be shown, rather than fixed on a metal base, as other museums have traditionally done.

Gorovoy called Glenstone's holdings of late pieces in particular "unparalleled."

"To take this in-depth trajectory is really significant," he said.

There's a series of six hand-colored etchings, "I Give Everything Away," that Bourgeois created in 2010, the year she died at the age of 98.

The elderly artist here made her final goodbyes with messages such as "I am packing my bags" in shaky handwriting alongside large images of humans, plants or abstract forms.

After taking this journey, it's a relief to step out into Glenstone's carefully manicured landscape of rolling hills, meadows and woodlands, the air filled with birdsongs and the sun-tinged fragrance of spring.

"Louise Bourgeois: To Unravel a Torment" runs through January 2020, with a temporary closure in September as Glenstone prepares to unveil on October 4 the site's stunning expansion that will make it America's biggest private art museum. —AFP ■

Nine Inch Nails to sell most tour tickets offline only

NEW YORK — American rock band Nine Inch Nails have announced they will sell tickets for their upcoming tour from physical vendors, in a bid to avoid abuse by online ticket touts.

On their website, the band said "limited quantities" of tickets will be available online at an unspecified later date -- but for the most part, fans will have to line up in person to get tickets for the "Cold and Black and Infinite" North American tour.

"The promise of a world made better by computers and online connectivity has failed us in many ways, particularly when it comes to ticketing," the group, founded in 1988, said on their official website.

"Everything about the process sucks and everyone loses except the reseller," they added. "We've decided to try something different that will also likely suck, but in a different way."

The announcement of the tour, which also features Scottish alternative rockers Jesus and Mary Chain, came as the American group released a six track mini-album entitled "Bad Witch." The 26-date tour, from September to December, will see the bands play mid-size venues, such as New York's 6000-capacity Radio City Music Hall and the Palladium in Los Angeles, which holds just under 4,000 people. For years, online ticket sales have been plagued by resellers using bots to instantly buy in-demand tickets to then offer at hiked-up prices — meaning fans miss out on face-value seats. —AFP ■

Hollywood glitters as 'Star Wars' stages 'Solo' premiere

LOS ANGELES — Lucasfilm brought the biggest party in the galaxy to Hollywood on Thursday as rapt devotees gathered under the Millennium Falcon for the world premiere of the latest "Star Wars" spin-off.

"Solo: A Star Wars Story," which gets its US release on 25 May, tells the coming-of-age tale of smuggler Han Solo before he was the galaxy's most adored scoundrel.

The glittering array of stars in Hollywood Boulevard included cast members Alden Ehrenreich, Woody Harrelson, Emilia Clarke, Donald Glover, Thandie Newton and Paul Bettany.

"One of my favorite movies growing up was 'Butch Cassidy and the Sundance Kid.' I think this movie has a little bit of the fun of that film," said Ehrenreich, who plays Solo, on the red carpet.

Hollywood's A-list — "Star Wars" alumni or otherwise — turned out for the second in the "anthology" series of spin-off films that started in 2016 with "Rogue One."

Among them were Mark Hamill, Ewan McGregor, Sofia Vergara, Alexandra Daddario, Benjamin Bratt and Johnny Knoxville.

The Disney-owned Lucasfilm delighted fans in April with a sneak peak of one of the most hotly-anticipated scenes from the movie, the first meeting between the young Solo and Glover's Lando Calrissian.

"A very slow week, but hopefully it will speed up as soon this movie comes out," joked Glover, whose rap alter ego

Childish Gambino has racked up a record-breaking 70 million YouTube views in just four days with his latest single "This Is America"

Glover said the best thing about playing Lando was the fans, who began recognizing him as the galaxy's sexiest gambler the very day he was announced for the part, when he went for a pizza. —AFP ■

Leeds United beats Myanmar in second friendly

IN their second friendly in Myanmar, English Football League club Leeds United played against the Myanmar national football team at Mandalay Thiri Stadium in Mandalay yesterday, defeating them by a score of 2-0.

The youths comprising Leeds United FC were very strong in yesterday's match with sure and steady ball handling.

Myanmar played Leeds United to a draw in the first half with flawless defence.

The second half was very different. After Leeds United made some substitutions, Leeds was markedly better, with speedy play and great ball support.

At the 58-minute mark, after an error of the Myanmar goalkeeper, Leeds United youth striker Ryan David scored the opening goal with a soft kick of the ball into the net. With the first goal scored, the match began to heat up.

attacking style, but their efforts were negated with the brilliant football control of Leeds United.

Lacklustre Man Utd seal second with stalemate at West Ham

LONDON — Manchester United manager Jose Mourinho refused to criticise his side despite another display lacking inspiration in attacking areas as they sealed second place in the Premier League with a 0-0 draw at West Ham on Thursday. In a game of precious few clear-cut chances, Luke Shaw hit the post and Paul Pogba headed wide with United's best opening. A third blank in their last five league games for United means local rivals Manchester City can seal another Premier League record by winning the league by at least 19 points if they win at Southampton on the last day of the season on Sunday.

"We are the second best team in the Premier League, a fantastic competition with lots of good teams," said Mourinho.—AFP ■

Myanmar in final of AFF U-16 Girls' Championship

THE Myanmar U-16 Girls' football team advanced to the final of the AFF U-16 Girls' Championship with an exciting 6-5 win over the team from Laos that had to be decided with penalty shootouts at Bumi Sriwijaya Stadium in Indonesia yesterday.

The contest was evenly matched, with both Myanmar and Laos playing back and forth in the middle of the pitch at the beginning of the match.

At the 27-minute mark, the match came alive with an opening goal for Myanmar scored by Myat Noe Khin, who was able to manoeuvre between the Laos defenders and kick a low and accurate shot directly into the net.

Laos changed into an offensive style of play in the second half, creating several scoring chances.

At the 57th minute, Laos got the equaliser when Pimpha Thongsavang got through Myanmar's defence before delivering a shot past the Myanmar keeper Sein Lat Lat Oo.

Myanmar survived a miss from Myat Noe Khin to win in sudden death after the score was tied 3-3 after the first five shooters. The game was a thriller from start to finish, with the score at the end of regulation time knotted at 1-1.

The Myanmar girls made good decisions in the penalty shootout.

Laos missed their last attempt off Sengdeuan Phongphallath as Pimpha Thongsavang, Saysamone Inthaphone and Phonesavanh Phonesavanh also missed.

Vilayphone Phengsana, Inthida Khounsy, Pe Pe and Chaikham Chaikham converted theirs.

Myanmar's Zin Mar Htwe scored the crucial goal. Su Pyae Pyae Kyaw, Khin Myat Moe, Pont Pont Pyae Maung and Phyu Phyu Win were also able to score in the shootout.

May Thawe Ko and Khaing Thazin Oo missed their attempts.

At Athletic Jakabaring 1 Stadium, defending champions Thailand won 5-4 also on penalty shots over Vietnam after the completion of regulation time resulted in a scoreless draw.
