100 Myanmar books comes out in early 2018

Union Minister Dr Pe Myint (Centre) holds talks with the laterati at the meeting on 17 December. PHOTO: MNA

THE first sequence of a compilation of novels of the 100 Myanmar books comes out in early 2018, according to a meeting held in Yangon yesterday morning.

It was the fifth meeting in connection with the publication of the 100 Myanmar books in which laterati formulated the 100 Myanmar books program and Union Minister for Information Dr Pe Myint facilitated the work of compiling fine literature of both artistic and knowledge fields for the first sequence. The format, theme font, size and lists of books for the series had already been approved at the meetings participated by the Information Ministry, the relevant action committees and the laterati. Sequences of poem compilation will follow the compilations of novels as the 100 Myanmar books will appear in two sequences per year.

The meeting at Printing and Publishing Department also discussed republishing of the volumes of Myanmar encyclopedia.

In his response to the progress of work presented by PPE officials and laterati, the Union minister looked into the sector-wise requirements for the soonest publication of error-free revised volumes involving the up-to-date facts especially on the regions and states.

China donates USD 0.5m for peace process

THE People's Republic of China donated USD 500,000 to National Reconciliation and Peace Center yesterday afternoon in Nay Pyi Taw.

Speaking at the ceremony at the center, Mr. Sun Guoxiang, Special Envoy of Asian Affairs of the Ministry of Foreign Affairs of China said, "China supports Myanmar's peace process and will provide up to USD 3 million for it. The country will donate USD 1 million next year. Although the amount is not large, the donation reflects China's goodwill towards Myanmar as the two are friendly countries. China will provide more assistance for Myanmar."

Mr. Sun presented the cash donation to Vice-Chair of the Center and Chair of the Peace Commission Dr Tin Myo Win who in return handed over the certificate of honour. Dr Tin Myo Win said, "Peace is what the entire Myanmar wants. We are trying our best to end the problem that started in 1948. The President, the State Counsellor and the Commander-in-Chief of Defence Services pointed out peace as the core part of the country. China's assignment of a friend of Myanmar as the special envoy is an encouraging sign for the peace process. China's donation for peace is a symbol of friendship. The Government, the Parliament, the Tatmadaw and all the ethnic groups want peace. Myanmar hopes more peace aid from China. # Rubber export at border gates in November increases against October

MORE than 8,540 tons of rubber was exported to foreign countries in November through land points of entry, with estimated value of US$9.9 million. The export volume is up by 3,373 tons compared to October.

Meanwhile, sea route showed a decline of 809 tons compared to last month. Over 1,063 tons of rubber with estimated value of US$1.507 million was exported in November whereas October's rubber export was 1,872 tons.

Rubber export earned over $104 million as of 24th November in current Fiscal Year, according to the Commerce Ministry.

More than 90 per cent of rubber production goes to export market. The vast majority of Myanmar's rubber goes to China through cross-border trade gates and it is also exported to Malaysia, Singapore, Japan, Indonesia, Korea, Tai-

Bangladesh increases imports of freshwater fish from Sittway border

BANGLADESH increased its import of marine products from Myanmar via Sittway border trade camp in last November, according to border authorities.

From 25 November and 1 December of this year, Myanmar exported a wide variety of freshwater fish weighing 105 tonnes to the People's Republic of Bangladesh, earning US$0.099 million. The current figures show an increase of 45 tonnes against the previous week's export of 60 tonnes.

In addition, the country also exported $0.124 million worth of low-quality Emahta rice and plum jam weighing 347 tonnes to the neighbour within the aforesaid week. Ginger, peanuts, mung bean, dried plums, garlic, rice, saltwater prawn and fish, bamboo, blankets, candy, plum jam and footwear are included on the list of main export items at Myanmar-Bangladesh borders.

Myanmar's international trade through sea routes accounted for 80 per cent of the total, and the rest was conducted via border gates. The country conducts its border trade with neighbouring countries via 16 land border gates. —Shwe Khine ■

Myanmar-Middle East trade tops $257 million in current FY

EXTERNAL trade between Myanmar and Middle Eastern countries reached US$257 million as of this October, according to the latest statistical report of the Ministry of Commerce.

Between April and October of this year, the trans-continental region imported $79 million worth of commodities from Myanmar while its exports to the ASEAN member state totalled $177 million.

Fishery products and agriculture commodities such as beans, pulses, and rice top on the list of Myanmar's exports items to the Middle East market.

During the six consecutive years, the trade between the two countries hit a record high of more than $400 million in 2016-2017 financial year.

The ministry's statistics show that the Myanmar-Middle East trade was $381.351 million in FY2015-2016, $373.353 million in FY2014-2015, $267.306 million in FY2013-2014, $267.297 million in FY2012-2013 and $300.679 million in FY2011-2012.

Since April, the trade between Myanmar and American countries was $741 million, trade with European Union exceeded $1.3 billion and with ASEAN members amounted to $6.573 billion, according to the ministry.—

Antivenom to place on export market in early 2018

May Thet Hnin

ANTI snake-venom immunoglobulin produced by the state-owned Myanmar Pharmaceutical Factory is planned to export to Laos and Cambodia in February or March next year, said U Ko Ko Aung, the managing director of MPF.

"Previously, our production did not satisfy even local demand. And now it exceeded self-sufficiency and is planned to place on export market", he added.

"However, there has limit for our antivenom in export as it may be effective for snake-bite victims in some countries but not in some. This is why we explore markets in the neighbouring countries and India and Thailand themselves are exporting their antivenom. We will export our antivenom to Cambodia and Laos which do not produce antivenom yet. However, there has market competition against other antivenom exporting countries", he continued.

According to a research of the Ministry of Health and Sport, 80,000 vials of anti-venom are needed for local consumption MPF currently produce around 100,000 vials of anti-venom a year. About 50,000 vials of anti-venom for snake bites are slated for export.

MPF produced only 16,000 vials of anti-venom in 2012. Starting from 2015, production reached 80,000 vials of anti-venom. MPF increased its production to 100,000 vials in 2016.

Antivenom is manufactured by harvesting the immunoglobins from horse blood and Myanmar had lack of horse population for producing anti-venom serum and substandard technology.

At present, antivenom producing plant has established with estimated capital of US$30 million, with the help of technical assistance from Australia and Brazil which reduces the mortality of horse, explained by U Ko Ko Aung.

In 2012, around 400 horses died during the manufacturing process of anti-venom due to callous treatment. Thanks to proper treatment, only 86 horses resulted in death last year. Therefore, it already sorted out the problems of shortage of horses in antivenom production.

There are 287 products manufactured by MPF Insein and Kyaukse, including tablets, capsules, vials, etc. ■

Myanmar's largest corporations lend support to save wild elephants

TWO of the largest conglomerates in Myanmar – Kanbawza (KBZ) Group of Companies and Shwe Taung Group – have joined hands with VOICES FOR MOMOS, supporting the nationwide campaign to end the sale of elephant and other illegal wildlife products in Myanmar.

KBZ Group is amplifying the VOICES FOR MOMOS public education efforts through an integrated print, digital and outdoor advertising campaign that kicks off today at the Kyaiktiyo Pagoda (Golden Rock) in Mon State, with public service messages printed on the newly launched cable cars shuttling visitors to one of the country's most popular pilgrimage sites.

The region surrounding Golden Rock has been identified as one of the hotspots for illegal wildlife trading in Myanmar. By bringing the campaign closer to the area, KBZ Group and VOICES FOR MOMOS aim to directly reach illegal wildlife traders whilst educating the general public and discouraging local and foreign tourists from buying these products.

"KBZ Group believes all corporations should take a leading role and develop forward looking practices that take care of our planet and all living creatures. Working hand in hand with communities and different sectors, companies can set their business goals and integrate environmental considerations which help bring a positive impact to the planet. Mainstreaming best environmental practice and innovating new ones can help enable an environmentally sustainable economy," said Daw Nang Lang Kham, Executive Director of KBZ Group.

The KBZ Group is giving VOICES FOR MOMOS access to its wealth of communications assets including advertising spots across digital and broadcast channels, billboards and other out-of-home media.

Leveraging the strength and reach of KBZ Bank, it is also using their network of over 1000 ATMs and branches across the country to disseminate information about the elephant poaching crisis.

Meanwhile, Shwe Taung Group is hosting a series of VOICES FOR MOMOS events at two of their retail properties, Junction Square and Junction City. The campaign video and other materials will also be shown at the mall cinemas over the coming weeks.

Shwe Taung Group is one of Myanmar's leading corporations with a diversified portfolio of business interests. Shwe Taung Real Estate has an established track record of delivering quality real estate projects in Myanmar. It has developed more than 50 projects over 800 acres of land in Myanmar, including the Crystal Tower, Crystal Residences, Junction Square, Union Business Centre, Union Financial Centre, and Junction City.

"Sustainability is at the core of Shwe Taung's strategy. We actively engage in practices that meet the wider social, environmental and economic needs of our society. Environmental conservation is at the heart of these initiatives and protecting our iconic elephants is of paramount importance. We are delighted to extend our support to VOICES FOR MOMOS," said Dr Sandar Htun, Chief Executive Officer of Shwe Taung Real Estate.

Dr Christy Williams, Country Director, WWF-Myanmar said, "Just as it takes a village to raise a child, it takes the whole community to end the sale of elephant and other illegal wildlife products in Myanmar. Today, we're delighted to announce that two of the largest corporations in Myanmar have raised their powerful voices to save Myanmar's momos." VOICES FOR MOMOS is a campaign launched in response to the Myanmar elephant poaching and skinning crisis with the aim of encouraging individuals and organizations across all sectors to use their voice to call for the end of illegal wildlife sales in Myanmar. ## Sisters killed in auto accident

TWO sisters were killed the spot in a traffic accident happened on Saturday evening on the road between Mandalay and Monywa towns, according to a police report.

Travelling Monywa from Mandalay, a Parado car being driven by Than Soe Naing crashed into a big tree beside Monywa-Mandalay Road between mile posts No. 68/5 and 68/6 because the driver lost control of his car. The collision killed the two sisters—Daw Khin Hla Yee and Daw Tin Hla—who are retired teachers from Yangon while the two others, including a monk, sustained injuries.

Police have filed criminal charges against the driver for careless driving under Sections 304 (a), 337 and 338 of the Penal Code.—MW T (Monywa) ■

Beekeepers prepare to produce honey this blooming season

EFFORTS are being made by local beekeepers to commercially produce honey in the current blooming season, said U Aung Kyaw Oo, secretary of Sagaing Region Beekeepers Association.

The flowering season is drawing near in Gangaw Township in Sagaing Region, with the growers saying that beans, pulses, and sunflowers cultivated along the bank of Myittha River are expected to bloom very soon. Those beekeepers across the region and nearby areas have already moved to those plantations in Gangaw since the second week of this month in an effort to carry out honey production.

For the time being, beekeepers are trying to develop their beehives and increase the number of bees before pollination.

Many international buyers are already paying attention to domestically produced organic honey, which has good potential to sell in the international market.

Currently, China, Germany and Japan mostly import Myanmar honey produced in Sagaing Region through local honey trading companies.

Myanmar exported 2,400 tonnes of honey, mostly to China, Thailand, Japan and Canada in 2016-2017 fiscal year, earning more than US$43.4 million.—Win Oo (Zeyataing) ■

The GNLM presents the interviews with the chief ministers of regions and states who are delivering humanitarian aids and conducting rehabilitation programs in Maungtau region, Rakhine State.

Mandalay Region Chief Minister U Zaw Myint Maung

The State Counsellor summoned the chief ministers and gave instructions to partake in humanitarian aid and rehabilitation programs for ethnic peoples in Rakhine State. So we raised funds for the programs. Mandalay Region will build 60 homes complete with a school, a clinic and water and electricity supply systems. We got nearly one billion kyats as donations. This housing project will cost K 700 million. We are using internal strength in the ethnic rehabilitation programs. We come here and make every arrangement in person and look into the requirements with our own eyes. We want to show that the strength of the nation lies within. That is the essence. Rehabilitation is a continuous task. Sagaing Region Chief Minister Dr Myint Naing

We could collect a donation of K 350 million from townships and companies. We will build 45 homes at Mingyiywa village. We have already transferred the projected expenditure to the bank.

The remaining balance will be used in other necessary areas. As we are indivisible we will give necessary assistance for our ethnics.

Magway Region Chief Minister Dr Aung Moe Nyo

Twenty-five townships, particularly the companies in Magway Region donated nearly K 60 million for the people of Rakhine State. When added with funds allotted by the region government, the total amount reached K 190 million. We are going to build a two-storey school. Here transport is very poor. We will help to the most possible in the future also. Kachin State Chief Minister Dr Khet Aung

People in Kachin with the Union spirit and humanitarian spirit made donations to their best of the ability for their kith and kin in Rakhin State. We have the initial plan to build 20, homes. We received over K 280 million from companies and the public. We will continue to render assistance under the program of Kachin State and with public participation.

Chin State Chief Minister Salai Lian Luai

Chin State will provide assistance for the education sector. Under our plan we will build schools. It is my first visit to Rakhine State which in my view is more beautiful than Chin State in some places, especially the sea beaches.

Shan State Chief Minister Dr Lin Htut

With full Union spirit, I come here as the representative of Shan State. I hope that our help will create job opportunities and ensures social improvement of the people of Rakhine State, and it is our goal. We will build homes with the funds provided by the regional people, businesses and government.

Rakhine State Chief Minister U Nyi Pu

I am thankful to see chief ministers visiting our land to help us. Their assistance is much beneficial for the local ethnic peoples as it will develop the social standard in the long run. Their visit and help also serves as the morale booster for the local ethnics. ■

Doctors provide free treatment in Rakhine State

A team comprising 12 dental and oral surgeons provided free medical treatment in Maungtau Township, Rakhine State yesterday morning.

The team formed with members and officials of the Ministry of Health and Sports, Rakhine State Health Department, Myanmar Dental and Oral Medical Council after teaching proper tooth-brushing at Kaingyi village distributed toothbrushes and packages of toothpaste free of charge. They also provided free health care services for dental and oral patients at the village which has nearly 50 households.

“Precaution is better than cure. The root cause of the various types of dental and oral disorders is the unsystematic tooth brushing. Some even never brush their teeth and totally lack health knowledge. Everybody needs the habit of brushing the teeth daily,” explained Secretary Dr Myo Thant of the Council. The team also treated oral and dental patients at Marrawady basic education middle school.

At the clinic of No 2 border guard force at 4th mile, the team gave health awareness talks and provided toothbrushes and toothpastes free of charge to about 70 families. On 16 December, it carried out knowledge dissemination and medical treatments at Dapyuchaung village in Buth-

In addition to dental and oral services, the team also treated to children with cleft palate. The doctors performed surgical operation on ten cleft palate patients. The cause of the disease is the strong medi-

Water needed for everyone

“ONE can go without food for seven days but cannot go without water for one day,” as the Myanmar saying goes. It is meant to underscore the fact that food and water is very important for us. In fact, it is harmful for us not to drink clean drinking water as well.

With the increasing population and gradual deterioration of our natural environment, we are, presently, facing the problem of not having enough potable drinking water all over the world. Other challenges of climate change and natural disasters have also had a great impact on the supply of clean water.

Thus, concerted efforts are being made with great momentum for availability of clean drinking water and protection from natural disasters, all over the world. Very recently, to be exact, on December 11 and 12, the 3rd Asia-Pacific Water Summit was held in Yangon, where experts and leaders from regional countries shared knowledge and experiences to find practical solutions for acquiring adequate clean water.

Every nation is required to specifically make efforts for implementation of solving water issues such as acquisition of adequate water supply, valuation of water, protection from floods and storms, conservation of water resources effectively and systematic management of all our actions concerning water.

Asia-Pacific Water Summits have been held regularly. During the ten year period starting from the year-2007 when the 1st Asia-Pacific Water Summit was held, remarkable developments were achieved.

For Myanmar, though being situated among the over-populated countries, it can be said that there may not be great problems for drinking water. The volume of consumable water resources is 880.6 cubic kilometers in Myanmar, 105 cubic kilometers in Bangladesh, 1260.54 cubic kilometers in India and 2879.4 cubic kilometers in China respectively. According to the proportion of the country's area and population, our country does not have to worry that much about water.

Whatever it is, it will be the best for us to make preparations for the sake of our country. Every nation is required to specifically make efforts for implementation of solving water issues such as acquisition of adequate water supply, valuation of water, protection from floods and storms, conservation of water resources effectively and systematic management of all our actions concerning water. If we have done the above things, we need not worry too much about our increasing population. ■

Natural Beauty of Lisu Nationals

By Maung Maung Kyaw

STYLE of traditional costume of today's Lisu females must be said to be that preceding dressing style of today's belles. On seeing them from afar, they look like dressing a somewhat loose gown. From-waist-to-under-knee-long pajamas are sewn in vertical folds like European-style gowns. Home-woven clothing is dyed black or blue. On the fringe of the pajamas are sometimes dyed black or blue or sometimes woven with blue or black strips. Jackets they wear are long sleeved and buttoned down the front. Some well-to-do people have their clothes sewn with black and blue color mixed cloth. Fine and beautiful dressing style of Lisu girls is one of their attractions.

Over their coats, they wrap rings of flat enamel coins around their necks. On heads they wear a kind of hat with colored enamel beads fringed with miniature bells. Some girls wear big round ear rings.

Their traditional costumes make them look like strong-bodied pretty maids. Depending upon marital status, costumes are not designated in separation.

As for Lisu males, they put on pants and clothes like overcoats. Over them, they wear long and large kinds of another clothing again. Over waists, they wear a belt or something. They wear blackish turbans or leather hats.

What Lisu males usually carry are 4-ft-long sword put in a sheath, a cross bow and a bamboo case for holding arrows with them wherever they go.

The most important weapon for Lisu nationals is a cross bow used in hunting and defending themselves from dangers. It is not easy for an ordinary man to cock a cross bow. They can shoot a poison-coated arrow at an enemy from a 30-foot-far place.

They always wrap their lower parts of their legs with cloth. Ancient Lisu nationals never used to wear footwear. In the past, they were in the habit of worshipping gods.

At the time when Morse missionaries arrived at Puta-O

just prior to the Second World War, they converted into Christianity.

Had a Lisu lad been fond of a Lisu maid, firstly he had to send a middle-man to the maid's parents for betrothal. Provided that the maid's side agreed to accept the engagement, the lad's side must pay dowry as much as they can, to the maid's parents.

Before marriage, the lad has to pay the dowry beforehand, to ensure the wedlock, at the time when the betrothal ceremony is held. If relatives sometimes get married, dowry is no longer needed.

When married, the bride surrounded by women on the bridegroom's side is brought to the groom's residence.

The day after the wedding ceremony, friends and relatives are invited to be entertained with a feast.

A few days later, the newly wedded couple has to entertain guests again at the dwelling place of the bride's parents. Therefore, a wedding ceremony of Lisu nationals can be said to cost a lot. The bride is required to live in her spouse's house till the time when the first-born child is delivered at her husband's living abode.

Only after then, they have to live separately, not under the same roofs with parents from both sides. Only if, previously, parents agreed with the marriage, could the couple manage to be married, whereas now youths can get married if they love with each other.

There never used to divorce after wedlock.

In former time, there was a custom of wonder among some Lisu nationals living in the Basin of Thanlwin River [formerly called Salween]. After the wedding ceremony, the bride and her parents had to go up to a hideout on mountains to conceal themselves from the sight of the groom.

The groom must look for the bride and when found they have to spend for a night till the next morning on the mountain. Among the Lisu/Lishaw families residing Kengtung area, there is a custom of eloping with a lover, out of parent's control, spending for one or two days there.

Later on, they can manage to get married. In fact, they have no habits of eloping with a lover, belonging to the good-natured race.

Lisu people drink their traditional liquor made from rice, which is called, "Khaung-Yay."

The couples have the custom of sipping liquor from a cup together, between males, or females or male and female as a sign of showing close friendship, accordingly the custom is called 'Event of Drinking Love.' Yet, in later days the custom vanished according to the prohibition of missionaries.

One of the characteristics of Lisu is that they play a kind of stringed instrument such as mandolin.

It is called "Kyi-Phwe," in Lisu language. Similarly, they play other musical instruments called "Moung," which is played by biting with mouths, a long flute called "Kyway-Hlee," and a short flute called, "Htu-Li." While playing these musical instruments, females and males dance face to face with each other, in queue. To the accompaniment of changing music, their dancing patterns change together with changing steps.

This dance is called in Lisu, "Che-Ngo-Che." In every occasion many Lisu nationals meet, they usually dance their traditional dance while playing "Kyi-Phwe." Such a scene always gives us a happy feeling. ■

Without Regional Collaboration, Southeast Asia Will Struggle in the Fourth Industrial Revolution

TO successfully deal with the profound challenges of the Fourth Industrial Revolution, member states of the Association of Southeast Asian Nations (ASEAN) need to improve their collaboration. This is the conclusion of a new joint report launched today by the Asian Development Bank (ADB) and the World Economic Forum.

The report, ASEAN 4.0: What Does the Fourth Industrial Revolution Mean for Regional Economic Integration?, analyses how emerging technologies will reshape Southeast Asia, and identifies actions for ASEAN leaders to prepare for the deep transformations that lie ahead. The report acknowledges the many existing national strategies for the Fourth Industrial Revolution, such as Thailand 4.0 or Singapore's Smart Nation initiative. But it argues that ASEAN must think at the regional level, not the national level.

The treatment of cross-border data flows, for example, is one of the pressing issues highlighted by the report. As data currently are prevented from flowing seamlessly across borders, new technologies such as telemedicine or the internet of things will be limited in their potential.

The report offers seven recommendations for ASEAN leaders to prepare their institutions for the coming challenges associated with the Fourth Industrial Revolution:

1. The ASEAN Secretariat has to become a "platform organization" that allows for the integration of input from multistakeholder groups of experts.
2. The secretariat should delegate more activities to affiliated functional bodies.
3. Long-term blueprints should be replaced with 3-year rolling plans. Considering the speed of the Fourth Industrial Revolution, most forecasts will quickly be outdated. ASEAN must be agile and allow for course correction.
4. Ask the people: Democratize and decentralize policy formulation. This will make the ASEAN policy-making process more inclusive, and make ASEAN an organization truly owned and managed by the people for their benefit.
5. Establish pan-ASEAN test beds for new approaches to regulation as a way to nurture multi-country experiments in shaping new technologies.
6. Hire staff capable of running a platform model effectively. The staff must be well versed in managing the new Fourth Industrial Revolution tools and have a strong record in this regard.
7. Adopt a new funding model to provide more funding for the ASEAN Secretariat's operation.

"Today, the technologies of the Fourth Industrial Revolution appear to be contributing to rising inequality around the world. But this need not be the case," said ADB Vice-President Stephen Groff. "With prudent fiscal management and appropriate policy, opportunities for lifelong learning and incentives for skills training can be created. And this is especially true for ASEAN. ADB considers the potential impact of Fourth Industrial Revolution technologies on jobs in ASEAN a critical area for exploration to support inclusive growth in years ahead."

"The Fourth Industrial Revolution is unfolding at tremendous speed. Indeed, the pace of change is accelerating. All over the world, governments are struggling to keep up," said Justin Wood, Head of Asia Pacific and Member of the Executive Committee at the World Economic Forum. "The traditional ways of shaping policy, writing regulations and setting standards are too slow, too top-down and too backward-looking. What is needed is an approach that is much faster, more agile, more experimental, and more iterative."

"While there is a lot to celebrate on the 50th anniversary of ASEAN, we mustn't rest on past achievements," said Nazir Razak, Chairman, CIMB Group Holdings, Malaysia, and Chair of the ASEAN Regional Strategy Group (RSG). "This revolution will transform everything, from economic structures to social systems. Many aspects of our lives will improve. But there will also be many worrying challenges, such as how automation and artificial intelligence are replacing jobs. We have to understand these issues and have appropriate policies to address them."—ADB■

Ethnic Kayins celebrate New Year

Zaw Gyi

ETHNIC Kayin people celebrated their New Year with traditional dances and songs in Insein, a satellite town in the north of Yangon yesterday evening.

Kayin New Year Celebrations Central Committee (Greater Yangon) Chairman Mahn Shwe Pyi Aye declared the celebrations open.

The New Year celebrations also served as the showcase of Kayin culture as it exhibited an array of boots displaying folk art, souvenirs and other utensils of Kayin people. The event drew a large crowd as its included sports activities, games, funfairs, shops and restaurants.

The second day event will see ethnic Kayins saluting the State Flag and the Kayin Flag and talks in commemoration of the New Year at 6 am, followed by sports activities, games, and funfairs till noon.

In the evening at Myanmar Convention Centre there will be traditional dances of various categories, performances of the Attachment of the Clouds violin group, modern Kayin songs, poem recitations and children's programs.

Prize presentation will be held on 19 December the final day of the celebrations. The New Year originates from the collective harvesting festivals held by the Kayin ancestors. ■

Myanmar Scout delegation arrives back

TWELVE Myanmar Scout representatives headed by U A Kyaw, U Tin Maung Latt, Daw Myint Sein and Daw Thit Oo who participated at the 1st Solar Scouts Jamboree festival arrived back Myanmar yesterday evening and was welcomed by Myanmar Scout Chief Organizer U Aye Kyaing, senior scouts and youth scouts.

The 1st Solar Scouts Jamboree festival was supervised by National Scout Organization of Thailand and was held marking the birthday of Thailand King's daughter at Vajiravudh Camp from 11 to 15 December.

Present were Mr. Kongnut Phai Boon, in charge of Scouts Jamboree festival, Thailand scout organizations and over 15,000 youth scouts from Thailand, Myanmar, Pakistan, Viet Nam, Sri Lanka, Malaysia, Indonesia and Bhutan.

In the event, the scout delegations were divided into three groups titling Solar for Life, Solar for health and Solar for Environment and held discussions, and took part in the performances, singing and games.

At the ceremony, the national flags of Thailand, Myanmar,

Pakistan, Viet Nam, Sri Lanka, Malaysia, Indonesia and Bhutan were raised, with national anthems of respective countries and the Scout Oaths.

Asia-Pacific Regional Scout Committee Director Mr. Kongnut

Phai Boon also delivered speeches and appreciated Myanmar Scout delegation headed by Dr Tin Nyo for having good disciplines, alertness, communication skills and teamwork.

Myanmar scout representatives, together with scout representatives from other seven countries attended the birthday party of the Thailand King's daughter held at a temple near the Jamboree camp.

Back home, the Myanmar

Scout delegation will stage public activities and share the knowledge and experience they gained at the 1st Solar Scouts Jamboree festival for creating a better world through energy saving.

Trump allies say Mueller unlawfully obtained thousands of emails

WASHINGTON — An organisation established for US President Donald Trump's transition to the White House said on Saturday the special counsel investigating allegations of Russian meddling in the 2016 election had obtained tens of thousands of emails unlawfully.

Kory Langhofer, counsel to the transition team known as Trump for America, Inc. (TFA), wrote a letter to congressional committees to say Special Counsel Robert Mueller's team had improperly received the emails from the General Services Administration (GSA), a government agency.

Career staff members at the agency "unlawfully produced TFA's private materials, including privileged communications, to the Special Counsel's Office," according to the letter, a copy of which was seen by Reuters. It said the materials included "tens of thousands of emails."

Trump's transition team used facilities of the GSA, which helps manage the US government bureaucracy, in the period between the Republican's November presidential election victory and his inauguration in January.

The Trump team's accusation adds to the growing friction between the president's supporters and Mueller's office as it investigates whether Russia interfered in the election and if Trump or anyone on his team colluded with Moscow.

Asked for comment, White House spokeswoman Sarah

FBI Director Robert Mueller testifies at a Senate Intelligence Committee hearing on Capitol Hill in Washington, DC, US on 16 February 2011. PHOTO: REUTERS

Sanders said: "We continue to cooperate fully with the special counsel and expect this process to wrap up soon."

The special counsel's office waved off the transition team's complaint.

"When we have obtained emails in the course of our ongoing criminal investigation, we have secured either the account owner's consent or appropriate criminal process," said Peter Carr, spokesman for the special counsel's office.

The GSA did not respond immediately to a request for comment.

Democrats say there is a wide-ranging effort by the president's allies on Capitol Hill and in some media outlets to discredit Mueller's investigation.

Trump himself has loudly declared Mueller's effort a waste of time. "There is absolutely no collusion. That has been proven,"

Trump told reporters on Friday.

Russia denies interfering in the election. On Friday, Representative Adam Schiff, the top Democrat on the House of Representatives Intelligence Committee, said he fears the committee's Republican majority intends to close its investigation of the topic prematurely. Some Republicans have argued that Mueller is biased against Trump and should be fired.

Langhofer's letter was sent to the US Senate Committee on Homeland Security and Government Affairs, and the US House Committee on Oversight and Government Reform.

It asked for Congress to act immediately "to protect future presidential transitions from having their private records misappropriated by government agencies, particularly in the context of sensitive investigations intersecting with political motives."

The letter said Mueller's office obtained the emails despite the fact that it was aware the GSA did not own or control the records. It said the special counsel's office has "extensively used the materials in question, including portions that are susceptible to claims of privilege" without notifying the Trump for America team.

On the transition team were a number of aides who were later caught up in Mueller's investigation, such as former national security adviser Michael Flynn.

Flynn pleaded guilty this month to lying to the FBI about his contacts with Russia.

Langhofer, the Trump transition team lawyer, wrote in his letter that the GSA's transfer of materials was discovered on 12 and 13 December.

The FBI had requested the materials from GSA staff on 23 August, asking for copies of the emails, laptops, cell phones and other materials associated with nine members of the Trump transition team responsible for national security and policy matters, the letter said.

The FBI requested the materials of four additional senior members of the Trump transition team on 30 August, it said.

Langhofer argued that, while such transition teams are involved in executive functions, they are considered private, non-profit organisations whose records are private and not subject to presidential records laws.— Reuters ■

Australia arrests man accused of trying to sell missile parts for North Korea

MELBOURNE — Australian police said on Sunday they had arrested a man accused of working on the black market to sell missile components and coal on behalf of North Korea, the first charges ever brought in Australia over the sale of weapons of mass destruction.

The man had been charged with two counts under an act preventing the proliferation of weapons of mass destruction, police said, and with another four under legislation enforcing United Nations and Australian sanctions against North Korea.

Foreign minister warns UK cannot become 'vassal state' of EU

EDINBURGH — Britain must strike a strong trade deal with the European Union after Brexit and avoid becoming a subordinate state of the bloc, foreign minister and leading Brexiteer Boris Johnson has told the Sunday Times newspaper.

Failure to ditch EU law would make the United Kingdom a "vassal state," Johnson said in an interview to be published on Sunday. The government must aim to "maximize the benefits of Brexit" by getting divergence from the bloc's rules so that it could do "proper free trade deals" with other countries.

Prime Minister Theresa May this week secured an agreement with the EU to move Brexit talks on to trade and a transition pact. But she must now unite her deeply divided cabinet over what trade deal Britain actually wants.

Separately, in a measure of the difficulty May will face in bringing her side together, finance minister Philip Hammond caused a stir amongst some Brexit supporters because he said that after Britain formally leaves the EU in March 2019, it will seek to replicate the current status quo in a transition period.

Former work and pensions minister Ian Duncan Smith criticized Hammond, as did other leading Brexit supporters, for making a statement which he said was "not government policy".

Johnson told the Sunday Times he would advance the case for a "liberal Brexit" in a new intervention in the debate this week in which he would play up the advantages of leaving the EU.— Reuters ■

Thousands flee as wildfire 'beast' grows to California's third-largest

VENTURA, (Calif.) — A raging California wildfire powered by fierce winds grew into the third-largest in state history on Saturday as forced evacuations turned neighbourhoods into ghost towns and ash fell in some areas like heavy snow.

High winds and dry conditions were expected to remain through the weekend to power the so-called Thomas Fire in Southern California. It has destroyed more than 1,000 structures and threatened 18,000 more since erupting on 4 December, including homes in the wealthy enclave of Montecito just outside the coastal city of Santa Barbara.

"It is a beast," Santa Barbara County Fire Department Division Chief Martin Johnson told a news conference.

"But we will kill it," he said.

Nearly 8,500 personnel using nearly 1,000 engines and 32 helicopters were battling the blaze, which was 40 per cent contained on Saturday evening. It has become the seventh-most destructive in state history, officials said.

A new evacuation order was issued for parts of Santa Barbara County on Saturday as high winds whipped the fire through bone-dry terrain.

In Montecito, smoke billowing from nearby canyons and pushed by the high winds choked the air, hindering aircraft from dropping flame retardant, the Governor's Office of Emergency Services said.

The wildfire forced many schools to close for days, shut roads and drove hundreds of thousands from their homes. It was also responsible for poor air quality throughout Southern California.

An evacuation order for the city of Ventura, which was hit hard in the first days of the fire, was lifted on Saturday morning. "Our backyard, it's like a rain of ash. I don't even want to step back there," said Janet Harrington, 56, an artist and writer who grew up and lives in Ventura.

Her son Ryan said: "I can count 10 people who lost their homes. My best friend from high school, his mom's house burned down."

The total cost of fighting the fire had come to more than $110 million by Saturday evening, as flames blazing over steep hills lit up the night skies.

The 13 days of shifting winds and evacuations have taken their toll on a weary population.

Paul Pineda, who lives in Fillmore, about 55 miles (90 km) northwest of Los Angeles and on the eastern flank of the fire, said he will flee if the blaze gets too close.

"It's pretty crazy. Went to sleep last night about midnight and then woke up to the roar of this fire coming through about 3 am" Pineda said. This year has been unprecedented for California in terms of structures lost and the size of the wildfires, officials said. Five of 20 most destructive fires in recorded history ravaged the state in 2017, according to Cal Fire. —Reuters ■

Mudslide in southern Chile kills five, at least 15 missing

SANTIAGO — A mudslide on Saturday tore through a small village in southern Chile near a popular national park, leaving five people dead and at least 15 missing after a night of torrential downpours, authorities said.

A video taken from a helicopter by Chilean police showed a vast swath of the remote town of Villa Santa Lucia, near Chaiten in coastal Patagonia, buried beneath the mud as the landslide ploughed its way down a flooded river valley.

Four Chileans and a male tourist whose name and nationality have not been disclosed were died in the mudslide, authorities said.

Rescue workers were continuing to search through the debris for at least 15 people.

The mudslide also destroyed a school and several homes and roadways as well as a voting centre ahead of Chile's presidential election on Sunday.

President Michelle Bachelet declared the area a disaster zone.

"I have ordered rescue workers to put all the necessary resources toward protecting the people of Villa Santa Lucia," she said on social media.

More than 4.5 inches (11.4 cm) of rain fell in 24 hours, the country's Interior Ministry said, but weather conditions were expected to improve later in the day.

Villa Santa Lucia borders Chile's Corcovado National Park, a popular tourist region of volcanoes, fjords and vast forests.

Argentina fires head of navy over submarine tragedy

BUENOS AIRES — Argentina fired the head of its navy a month after a submarine disappeared in the South Atlantic with 44 crew members onboard, a government spokesman said on Saturday.

Letting go of Navy Admiral Marcelo Eduardo Hipólito Srur was the first known disciplinary action taken by President Mauricio Macri's administration since contact was lost with the ARA San Juan on 15 November.

"It was decided to remove him," a government spokesman said. Families of the crew members criticized Macri's government for not clearly communicating with them and for abandoning rescue efforts. The navy said on 27 November that water that entered the submarine's snorkel caused its battery to short-circuit before it went missing. The navy had previously said international organizations detected a noise that could have been the submarine's implosion the same day contact was lost. —Reuters ■

US, Russian, Japanese crew blasts off for space station

BAIKONUR (Kazakhstan) — A trio of US and Japanese astronauts and a Russian cosmonaut blasted off from Kazakhstan on Sunday for a two-day trip to the International Space Station, a NASA TV broadcast showed. Commander Anton Shkaplerov of Roscosmos and flight engineers Norishige Kanai of Japan Aerospace Exploration Agency and Scott Tingle of NASA lifted off from the Baikonur Cosmodrome at 1:21 pm local time (0721 GMT/0221 EST).

The crew will gradually approach the station, which orbits about 250 miles (400 km) above Earth, for two days before docking. Shkaplerov, Kanai and Tingle will join Alexander Misurkin of Roscosmos and Mark Vande Hei and Joe Acaba of NASA, who have been aboard the orbital outpost since September.

Onboard cameras showed crew members making thumbs-up gestures after the blast-off. Also visible was a stuffed dog toy chosen by Shkaplerov's daughter to be the spacecraft's zero-gravity indicator. Soyuz was safely in orbit about 10 minutes after the launch.—Reuters ■

SHANGHAI — A second prototype of China's large passenger jet C919 completed its maiden flight in Shanghai Sunday, which was marked as a step closer to China becoming a global aviation powerhouse.

The domestic jet took off shortly after 10:30 am in Shanghai Pudong International Airport and the flight lasted around 2 hours. It tested the performance of the C919 major systems and equipment, such as taking-off and landing, navigation and communication, speed acceleration and deceleration.

The first C919 made its maiden flight in May. It conducted its first intercity test flight in November.

The Commercial Aircraft

Corporation of China plans to produce six aircraft for flight testing.

More than 1,000 tests will be carried out.

With a standard range of 4,075 kilometers, the C919 jet is comparable to the updated Airbus 320 and Boeing's new generation 737.—Xinhua ■

China unveils 2017-2021 winter clean heating plan: media

BEIJING — China announced on Sunday a five-year plan to convert northern Chinese cities to clean heating during the winter through 2021, state media reported, amid a deepening heating crisis.

An unprecedented government campaign to switch millions of households and thousands of businesses from coal to natural gas in northern China this winter has backfired.

Severe natural gas shortages have sent prices soaring nationwide, hitting businesses and residents across China's industrial heartland.

The plan was jointly announced by 10 government agencies, including the state planning National Development and Reform Commission and the National Energy Administration, the online edition of Securities Times quoted the China Energy News as saying.

The plan covers 2017 through 2021.

The government has made "concrete arrangements" regarding geothermal heating, biomass heating, solar heating, gas heating, electric heating, industrial waste heating, clean coal-fired central heating, the Securities Times said. By 2019, half of northern China would have converted to clean heating, reducing bulk coal burning by 74 million tonnes, it said.—Reuters ■

Three dead after M6.5 quake hits Indonesia's Java Island

JAKARTA — A strong earthquake hit Indonesia's main island of Java just before midnight Friday, killing three people and sparking fears of a tsunami, officials said Saturday.

The US Geological Survey said the quake's epicenter was less than a kilometer outside the town of Cipatujah on the southern coast of West Java, and was measured at a depth of 91.9 kilometers.

The quake occurred at 11:47 pm local time, with tremors felt across the island including the capital Jakarta located on the northern coast of West Java about 300 km from the epicenter.

The country's meteorological, climatology and geophysics agency issued a warning for large waves along the coast, but the alert was lifted at 2:27 am after no tsunami was reported.—Kyodo News ■

Hollywood actor Dustin Hoffman accused of exposing himself to a minor

LOS ANGELES — More accusations! Legendary actor Dustin Hoffman is again in the spotlight after three women spoke to US magazine Variety about his sexual misconduct, including exposing himself to a 16-year-old in a hotel room.

Hoffman's attorney Mark A. Neubauer called the accusations against the actor "defamatory falsehoods". Hoffman himself hasn't made comments.

According to the report, Cori Thomas was a high-school classmate of Hoffman's daughter Karina when she met the actor in Manhattan, New York in 1980. When Thomas was waiting for her parents to pick her up, she was left in the hotel room with the actor alone.

Hoffman allegedly came out of the hotel bathroom with a towel wrapped around him and then dropped it and stood naked. He later put on a robe and sat on the bed and asked her to massage his feet, which she did. She then took the chance to leave when her mother called her from downstairs.

Melissa Kester said the Oscar-winner groped her and conducted unwanted sexual conduct with her while recording audio for the 1987 film "Ishtar".

A third woman who didn't reveal her name told Variety that Hoffman also sexually assaulted her in a station wagon while working on "Ishtar". But she had a subsequent sexual encounter with him, which she didn't know how to define.

Earlier, three women stepped forward to accuse the Hollywood actor of sexual harassment which they said happened decades ago. The first was author Anna Graham Hunter, who alleged Hoffman of groping her and making inappropriate comments when she was a 17-year-old intern on the set of the 1985 TV movie of Death of a Salesman. Hoffman had previously denied abusing Hunter.—Xinhua ■

First Tibetan Cultural Exhibition in Shwedagon Pagoda

A photo exhibition showcasing Tibetan culture was opened in the northern ward of Shwedagon Pagoda yesterday.

Attending the opening ceremony of the exhibition were Yangon Chief Minister U Phyo Min Thein, Chinese Ambassador to Myanmar Mr. Hong Liang, members of Chinese goodwill ambassadors to Myanmar and other invited guests.

Mr. Zhang Yun, head of the Research Department for Tibetan Culture, said the purpose of the exhibition was to allow Myanmar citizens to view the culture of Tibet which is seldom visited by Myanmar tourists.

The exhibition will last from 17 to 18 December, from 6am till 10pm. The exhibition contains a hundred pictures showcasing the religious side, society, natural beauty, economy and culture of Tibet.

U Sein Win Aung, Chairman of Myanmar-China Goodwill Association, said that Tibet occupies 200 kilometers of the China's border to Myanmar. He said this is why it is important to promote the culture of Tibet for future relationships.

Tibetans are one of the ethnics of China and Tibet is one of five self-administrative regions in China. Tibet has a population of 2.6 million people.

Ronaldo free kick gives Real another world title

ABU DHABI—Cristiano Ronaldo scored with a free kick which went through the defensive wall to break Gremio's brave resistance and give Real Madrid a 1-0 victory over the South American champions in the Club World Cup final on Saturday.

Ronaldo's 53rd-minute strike gave Real their second world title in a row, the third in the last four seasons, and ended Gremio's hopes of pulling off what would have been a huge upset. The European champions, enjoying the backing of most neutrals at the Zayed Sports City Stadium, dominated as expected, with 20 shots on goal to Gremio's one, but the much more limited Brazilians still made their lives uncomfortable.—Reuters ■

Napoli back on top after Inter lose unbeaten record

MILAN—Inter Milan suffered an unexpected first league defeat of the season on Saturday, going down 3-1 at home to midtable Udinese, and were knocked off the top of Serie A by Napoli after they won by the same score at Torino.

In the day's other game, AS Roma missed a second-half penalty but still beat Cagliari 1-0 with a stoppage-time goal by Federico Fazio, awarded after a consultation with the video assistant referee (VAR).

VAR was also used at the San Siro to award a second-half penalty to Udinese which Rodrigo De Paul converted in what proved to be the turning point as Inter were finally beaten in their 17th game of the campaign. The referee initially signalled a goal kick but changed his mind and gave handball against Davide Santon after consulting the VAR.—Reuters ■
