Anti-trafficking revised law to be instituted

By May Thet Hnin

THE Anti-trafficking in Persons Revised Law is expected to be approved by parliament in early 2018, said U Khin Maung Kywel, police superintendent of the anti-human trafficking police force.

“The amended law has been submitted to Hluttaw and it is likely to be approved in early 2018, he said.

The Anti-trafficking in Persons Law was enacted in September 2015 and was revised after seeing the merits and demerits that were revealed after the original law came into force.

“There is no remarkable amendment regarding crime and actions, but a new chapter was embodied in this law. In the current Anti-trafficking in Persons Law, anti-human trafficking police can firstly only report suspicious situations. According to the new chapter, they will be authorised to follow up, investigate and then take action against traffickers”, said Khin Maung Kywel.

VP U Henry Van Thio calls for sustainable tourism plans

He said systematic plans should be laid down for development of the country's tourism sector, as it is blessed with abundant tourism resources compared to neighbouring countries.

Despite the abundance of natural scenery and tourist attractions, the number of visitors to Myanmar still remained below expectations, U Henry Van Thio said.

More than 2.9 million foreign visitors visited Myanmar in 2016, and as of the end of October 2017, a total of 3.1 million foreign visitors had visited, an increase of 20 per cent compared to the same period last year.

The slow growth should be increased through retaining current growth momentum, and all need to pitch in and do this, the Vice President said.

The Asian countries of Thailand, the People's Republic of China, Japan, the Republic of Korea, the United States, and European countries including France, Britain, and Germany are seen to have the highest numbers of visitors to Myanmar. These countries need to be targeted especially so that more will come. At the same time, countries from which not many visitors are coming but have the potential to increase need to be selected and promoted with market development works to raise interest in Myanmar so that there'll be increase in the number of foreign visitors.

"While there is a need to promote Myanmar to the world as a place of interesting places to attract tourists, there is also a need to provide convenient and safe services and safe food to visitors when they visit Myanmar," said U Henry Van Thio.

He also highlighted other important points, including availability of visa-on-arrival at main entry airports, direct flights from international countries, and visa-free entry to nationals of countries that are set as target countries as the way to achieve success and development for a country's tourism industry.

He also called on private sector to cooperate with governmental departments for promoting the country's tourism industry.

"Those who are concerned with tourism are obliged to refute fake news that can damage the image of the country, as the development of the tourism industry depends upon the image of the country," said U Henry Van Thio.

The Vice President also stressed the need for stability to attract tourists.

Following the address of U Henry Van Thio, U Yi Mon, Permanent Secretary of the Ministry of Hotels and Tourism, suggested to announce the National Tourism Policy and to take into consideration suggestions of the Hluttaw Tourism Law Drafting Committee to the Draft Tourism Law. He also discussed policies related to the sale of alcohol in the excise law, a tourism tax, issuing special visas to tourists and establishing an e-tourism working group.

Union Ministers U Kyaw Win, U Kyaw Tin, U Thein Swe, Thura U Aung Ko, U Ohn Win and Dr. Myint Htwe, and deputy minister U Kyaw Myo, Permanent Secretary U Tin Myint, the chairman of Nay Pyi Taw Council and chief ministers of regions and states, took part in the discussions at the meeting.

The amended law was jointly formulated by local and international experts. The Union Attorney General's Office, the Anti-Trafficking in Persons Police Force, the Myanmar Police Force, the International Labour Organization and UNICEF conducted frequent negotiation meetings.

According to trafficking victim statistics released by the Anti-Trafficking in Persons Police Force, there were 102 crimes in 2013, 124 crimes in 2014, 131 crimes in 2015 and 2016 and 290 crimes this year as of November 2017.

The area where the highest number of cases occurred was Yangon Region with 54 cases, followed by Shan State with 52 cases. Twenty-nine trafficking-in-persons cases were reported in Kachin State, while Ayeyawady and Mandalay regions recorded 18 and 14 cases respectively. The Myanmar Police Force has taken action against a total of 609 people suspected of human trafficking.

"Punishment and sentences against human traffickers should be as they deserve. We hope to have more updated law", said Daw Mi Ki Kyaw Myint from the Asia Foundation.

According to the 2016 Trafficking in Persons Report, there

According to reports of transnational human trafficking, 80 per cent of victims are traded to China, 10 per cent to Thailand, and 6 per cent to Malaysia. Domestically, there is 4 per cent occurrence of domestic trafficking in persons. Women account for 85 per cent of trafficking victims, including minor females. Child trafficking constitutes 4.38 per cent of the crimes.

Myanmar cooperated with China and Thailand to combat trafficking in persons, opening liaison offices. Myanmar is one of the anti-trafficking actors in the region and Great Mekong Sub-region. ■

Coffee plantation zone planned for Kayin State

A plan is underway to set up a coffee plantation zone on 5,000 acres in Kayin State, mainly involving Thandaunggyi Township, according to a report yesterday in the Myawady Daily.

Both highland and lowland coffee varieties will be cultivated in the coming coffee season, officials said.

In addition to Thandaunggyi Township, Leiktho Township is also projected to be involved.

The agriculture department will distribute coffee seeds varieties to growers free of charge. Of the 50,000 acres of coffee plantation across the country, about 40,000 acres are for highland coffee. At present, more than 9,800 acres of coffee plantation have been developed in Kayin State, Shan State, the main coffee producer, has 27,000 acres of coffee plantation.

Ywangan coffee beans, globally recognized as a specialty coffee, is in high demand. Myanmar's Arabica is exported to ten countries including Thailand, Malaysia, China, the US and Taiwan.

Myanmar's coffee is mostly produced in Ywangan, Pyin Oo Lwin, Naungcho and Mogok townships.

This year coffee export volume amounted to 100 tons compare to that of previous years.—GNLM ■

Local freshwater fish supply in Mandalay Region inadequate

By Aung Thant Khaing

THE lack of locally raised freshwater fish in Mandalay is resulting in about 40,000 to 50,000 visses of fish to be sent daily into the Mandalay market from Yangon, as the supply in Mandalay Region cannot meet the demand, said U Hla Win, the director of the Fishery Department.

“We can see a vividly insufficiency of supply in Mandalay, seeing the inflow of fish from Yangon. Fish harvested in Mandalay is sent to Mogok town and Kachin State. Fish production in the region cannot keep up with that of Ayeyawady and Bago regions, he added. There are over 270 fish ponds and 8,000 fish farming lakes in Mandalay Region. Fish farming lakes produce only 1,500 to 2,000 visses of fish an acre, whereas production in Yangon, Bago and the Ayeyawady delta is 2,500 to 3,000 visses of fish per acre. A viss is equal to 1.6 kg.

“Commercial fish farming lakes are seen as lesser than small-scale farms. The main problem is the lack of advanced technology” U Hla Win said.

Thiri Mingala market is a wholesale and retail market of fish. More than seven trucks loaded with nearly 30,000 visses of fish are daily entering the market. Mandalay’s daily production is over 20,000 visses. Freshwater fish such as rohu, pomfret, river catfish, etc are sent mainly to Myitkyina market, according to the Kabarkyaw fish and prawn depot.

“Freshwater fish production in Mandalay region is low due to weaknesses in technology. Government subsidies are also required to enhance the fishing sector”, said U Kyaw, owner of the Kabarkyaw fish and prawn depot. ■

Thousand-year-long unity of glamour and prestige

THE State Counsellor and the Speaker of the Amyotha Hluttaw gave respective addresses on December 18 at the Kayin New Year Day celebrations which falls on Kayin Era 2757 1st Waxing of Pyatho, held at the Myanmar International Convention Center 2 in Nay Pyi Taw. Similar celebrations were held in festive mood across the nation, it was learnt.

Kayin New Year Day has been celebrated annually in Myanmar for 79 years. The Kayin New Year Day held since prior to gaining Myanmar's Independence while living under the colonial rule shows strength of unity of Kayin nationals living in the Union of Myanmar.

Over one hundred national ethnic races have been living in harmony and understanding in the Union of Myanmar since many years ago. Though being different in names such as Shan, Chin, Kachin, Mon, Bamar, Rakhine, Kayin and Kayah, we are all family members belonging to the Unique Family—the Union of Myanmar.

Traditional ceremonies of national ethnic races, their cultural festivals and festive events show that we never stand alone in separation, instead we coexist sharing throes, woes and happiness throughout our history, with family spirit like members of the same family. Since time immemorial, these national ethnic races had settled down here in the country. We all can be said to be family members living in the unique family, "the Union."

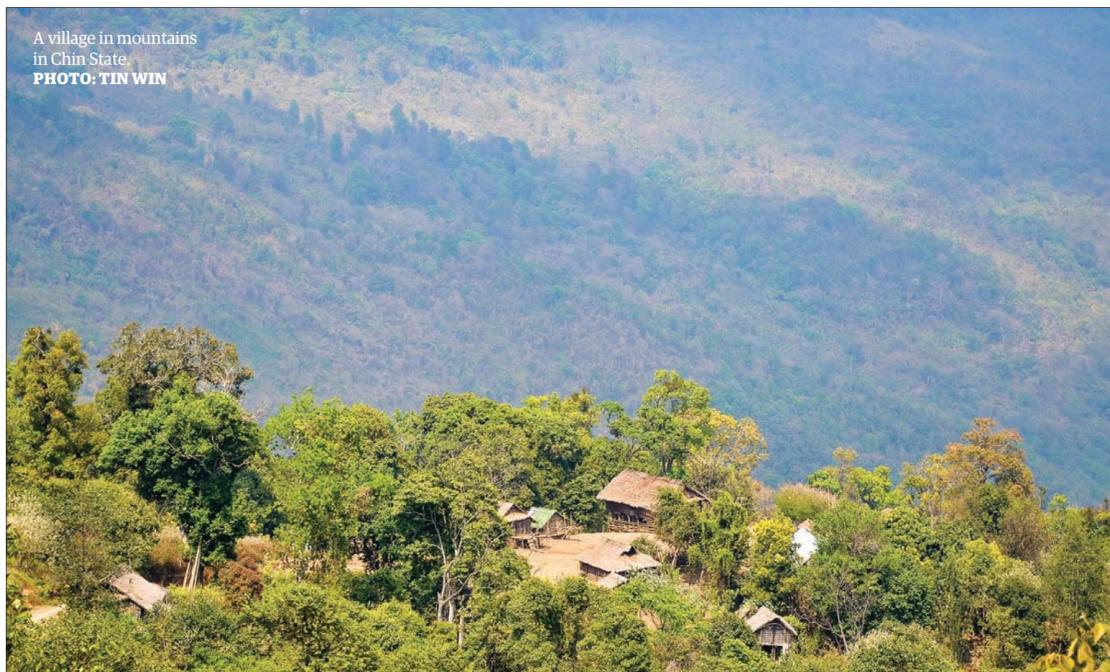

By nature, human beings go about far and wide for greener pastures, so now our nationals as well have been in many parts of the world. So, our planet is now being called the Global Village. Though living far apart from each other, we are all family members of the same Union, hence the need to live in unity and with family spirit. Mortals have different souls and minds, thus sometimes they may have different views and attitudes. Sometimes they may be disintegrated by ill-willed outsiders.

Whatever it is, we must preserve our cultural heritages handed down to us by our ancestors—simplicity, loyalty and open-mindedness. It is our historical obligations to preserve our ancestral cultural heritage of specific characteristics of similar national ethnic races including Kayin nationals, so that they will remain intact for generations to come.

With the strength of our unity and determination, our Union can stand tall amongst all other nations. It will be a grand grace and honour for us. Simultaneously, we must take lessons from the events when we were disunited by subversions of evil-minded outsiders, so that we will be able to co-exist eternally on this planet.

Hilly region of Chin nationals beginning to brighten from darkness

By Min La Pyae

SNOW-CAPPED mountains were overwhelmed with cool atmospheres. Ranges of mountains are situated as high walls from north to south. Eucalyptus, cherry and tree rhododendrons are growing in mosaic, on a vast land. Colorfully decorated houses made of bricks and corrugated iron sheets cannot be seen any longer in the dark whereas abodes with colorful electric bulbs are brightening on tops of the mountains. This is a scene on Chin hilly regions which are beginning to enjoy the nascent progress in the inhabitants' social life due to the availability of electricity.

ships—Haka, Htantalan, Phalan, Titein, Matupi, Mindat, Kanpetlet, Paletwa and Tonzan and other 6 towns. Until now, electricity had been supplied to Haka, Phalan, Htantalan, Mindat, Kanpetlet and Khaing Kam town from the National Power Grid Line, using 9.5 megawatt.

On October 19, 2017 U Min Naing, director of department of power supply and control, project for power distribution [Northern] explained to responsible officials of Chin State Government, "Mindat and Matupi are 220 miles far by road, but so as to save national finance and to distribute power to the public in the shortest power grid line we unavoidably to send it, passing Nat Ma Taung National Garden of 26.5 miles in length. Nat Ma Taung forest reserve from milestone 50 to 68 must be passed. For distribution of power not only in urban areas but also in rural areas, arrangement and necessary calculation should be made for acquisition of hydro power supply, because local villagers are feeling unhappy as they have no access to use electricity, though they are seeing gridlines passing their villages."

To the great delight of the local populace, 51.9 mile long 66 KVA gridline and 66/11 KV 5 MVA Matupi transformer started to be implemented, starting from FY 2017-2018. Gridlines are to be installed with great difficulties, even at the risk of lives at the places of cliffs, summits of the hills and some slopes, especially nearby 15 villages in Mindat township, namely—Dautdwe, Sheinparo, Shi, Ayetharyar, 40 mile village, Yaunglaung, 51 mile village, Twidein, Layshi, Hintone, Yantein-A, Yantein-B, Chanpyan-B and across two creeks—Mone Chaung and Lei Myo Chaung.

And, surveys are underway for construction of 16.3 mile long 66 KVA Thaingngin-Titein power gridline to be sent from National Power Gridline system and Titein transformer, starting from FY 2017-2018.

Though Titein transformer was targeted to be built on the flat ground between football playground of Titein SHS-2 and Office of Meteorology and Hydrology, it must be transferred to another as it is very close to MPT Fiber Cable. But, along the 66 KVA Thaingngin-Titein power gridline there are no forest area, hence no need to perform the tasks of land process.

Sulin, Thaingngin, Fort White, Arlwei, Sozem, Saungpee, Deinlo, Sezen and Titein villagers are situated near the gridline. Suitable route will be 16.3 miles only long to rebuild Thaingngin-Titein gridline. In FY 2018-2019 suitable route will be found to go round twice via Kalay to Chin State, without depending upon power gridline coming from Gantgaw in future. But surveys have not been done yet. It will be a great pleasure for local people and town dwellers.

As of FY 2018-2019, 37-mile-long

66 KV power gridline from Kyauktaw in Rakhine to Paletwa in Chin State, extension of Kyauktaw transformer and construction of Paletwa transformers will be implemented. Surveys had started since FY 2017-2018.

While building up Kyauktaw-Paletwa power gridline, it was learnt that the line had passed 4.41 miles within Kaladan reserve forests no. 5 and 4. It will go through Wagin, Winsu and Shwepyi villages in Kyauktaw township.

In installing 66 KV gridlines, the Ministry of Electrical Power and Energy will carry out the tasks—to choose the shortest route as much as possible, to choose the nearest place to roads so that maintenance work can be easily done, to choose suitable routes for potential loading in future, to abide by rules and regulations concerning farmers' possession and farming land, to avoid going near to hills and mountains, bridges, swamps and cliffs, religious edifices, schools, airport and military bases. It is difficult to find suitable routes as the work is generally done on hilly regions.

In installing 66 KV gridlines, suitable routes had been chosen to avoid villages, towns and civilian areas as much as possible from beginning to end, so as not to destruct social environment. Construction of TV Masts, in digging up the ground for building foundations the ground hole must be 25 feet in width for a tower. On completion of building towers there will be 4 concrete blocks measuring 1 ½ ft each in length, width and height left on the ground, after filling the ground. In surveying and carrying equipment and tools, special care must be given so as not to destroy crops and not to take places of electric accidents.

The Ministry of Electrical Energy and Power has been performing the tasks of negotiating for the use of land for erecting Towers to build 500 KV, 230 KV, 132 KV and 66 KV gridlines in addition to power gridlines—existing and under construction, collecting data on loss and destruction by township-level investigations formed by regional organizations regarding giving out compensations in case perennial plants and crops were destroyed, submitting to upper organizations by calculating according to the prices as designated in local area and handing over compensation money to persons in question for grievance individually after approval was received, across the nation for availability of electrical power mainly needed for national development.

To sum it up, with the broadmindedness of the Union Government, concerted effort of the Ministry of Electrical Energy and Power, cooperation between Chin State Government and Chin State Parliament and effort of Chin State Electrical Department, acquisition of power will increase and socio-economic development of the populace in Chin State will be achieved in near future.

POEM

In My Little Garden

In my poor, little garden grew colonies of weeds while in theirs were sown little flower seeds.

Here, in my garden, I'd been busy weeding while in theirs sprouted up delicate seedlings.

I've been weeding, weeding, for how long?
till the sweat from my brow touches the ground.

Red, red roses, already blooming in their garden!
Poor me, I haven't finished unloading this weeding burden.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Dear Editor

South East Asia is one of the richest biogeographically and biodiverse parts of the world. Myanmar being located at the heart of South East Asia is one of the most significant bio-diverse nation rich with virgin forests and spectacular wildlife. Unfortunately though in spite of the best efforts by the government agencies and non-government organizations, poaching is still continuing in various parts of the country unrestricted and unmonitored. The rich wildlife as well as major and minor forest products are being exploited and looted at an alarming rate depleting the precious natural resources. The silent and unseen presence of highly organized international poaching and wildlife trafficking groups both inside the country as well as highly sensitive and porous international border regions backed by illegal wildlife markets operating in different pockets of Asia is responsible for this serious depletion of wildlife and natural forests in addition to other anthropogenic factors like infringement into forested areas, illegal settlements around forest belts, infrastructural developments in forested areas without paying much attention to ecological sensitivity of the region as well as pollution and related reasons. Stringent monitoring and surveillance along with coordination between various departments will be essential in curbing poaching. The socio-economic conditions of the people living around fringe forest areas, forest inhabitants, tribal communities and remote settlements in sensitive border areas need to be improved for finding sustainable success in the conservation of natural resources.

Thanking you
Sincerely yours
Saikat Kumar Basu

Stronger winds loom as crews make progress on California wildfire

LOS ANGELES — Crews battling Southern California's sprawling wildfire made incremental progress in containing the two-week-old blaze but faced forecasts for stronger winds on Wednesday that threatened to make it the biggest in state history.

Firefighters halted the spread of the so-called Thomas fire at 272,000 acres (110,100 hectares) as of Tuesday and carved containment lines around 60 per cent of its perimeter, up from 55 per cent, a coalition of fire and law enforcement agencies said.

With progress being made against the blaze - which has scorched the dry coastal mountains, foothills and canyons of Ventura and Santa Barbara counties northwest of Los Angeles — officials said they had cut the number of firefighters to 6,500 from a peak of 8,500 over the past few days.

However, wind gusts from the north were expected to accelerate to 50 miles per hour (80 km per hour) at sunset on Wednesday and continue into Thursday, creating extreme fire danger conditions for Santa Barbara County, the National Weather Service said.

Ventura County, which has taken the brunt of the fire, is likely to experience 40 to 50 mph (64 to 80 kph) winds on Thursday and Friday, it said.

Fire managers were cautiously optimistic that they could protect populated areas against the predicted return of stronger winds, but were not letting their guard down.

"We are not out of the woods yet on this fire," Santa Barbara County Sheriff Bill Brown told reporters on Tuesday. "As we are all aware, this fire has proven to be very stubborn and very unpredictable."

Brown said some 2,000 of the county's evacuees were allowed to return to their homes on Tuesday.

The Thomas blaze, which became California's second largest wildfire on Tuesday, is nearly as large as the 2003

Cedar fire in San Diego County, which consumed a record 273,246 acres (110,579 hectares) and killed 15 people.

More than 1,000 homes and other buildings have gone up in flames, and about 18,000 structures remained listed as threatened since the fire started on 4 December. The cause has not been determined.

One firefighter died last Thursday near the town of Fillmore in Ventura County.

The Thomas fire was initially stoked by hot, dry Santa Ana winds blowing with rare hurricane force from the eastern desert, spreading flames across miles of drought-parched chaparral and brush in California's rugged coastal terrain.—Reuters ■

Borussia Dortmund bomb suspect to stand trial for attempted murder

FRANKFURT — A German-Russian man suspected of detonating three bombs targeting the Borussia Dortmund soccer team bus in April is due to appear in a German court on Thursday, charged with 28 counts of attempted murder.

The team was heading to the club's stadium for a Champions League match against AS Monaco on 11 April when the explosions went off, wounding Spanish defender Marc Bartra and delaying the match by a day.

Letters left at the scene had initially suggested Islamist militants were behind the bomb attack, but prosecutors later said the 28-year old suspect, a dual German and Russian national identified as Sergei V., was motivated by greed.

The attack near the Signal Iduna Park stadium, the largest in Germany, holding more than 80,000 fans, had nonetheless revived memories at the time of the November 2015 attacks in Paris that targeted entertainment venues including the Stade de France where France were playing Germany in a soccer friendly.

The start of the trial also comes only days after the anniversary of a deadly truck attack at a Berlin Christmas market, which killed 12 people and put the issue of security at the heart of political debate in Germany.

Prosecutors have alleged that the suspect in the Borussia bus bombing had hoped the attack would force down the club's share price, reaping him a profit on an investment.

He had bought options on the day of the attack entitling him to sell shares in Borussia Dortmund at a pre-determined price. But shares in BVB actually rose after the attack and are up 18 per cent so far this year.

In addition to the attempted murder charges, the Dortmund prosecutor's office also accuses the suspect of inflicting grievous bodily harm and of causing an explosion.—Reuters ■

Plastic found in mussels from Arctic to China — enters human food

OSLO — Tiny bits of plastic are contaminating mussels from the European Arctic to China in a sign of the global spread of ocean pollution that can end up on people's dinner plates.

Mussels in apparently pristine Arctic waters had most plastic of any tested along the Norwegian coast, according to a study this month by the Norwegian Institute for Water Research (NIVA).

Plastics may be getting swept north by ocean currents and winds from Europe and America, ending up swirling around the Arctic Ocean, NIVA researcher Amy Lusher told Reuters.

"Microplastics have been found in mussels everywhere scientists have looked," she said.

Past surveys have found microplastics off nations including China, Chile, Canada, Britain and Belgium. Off Norway, the molluscs contained on average 1.8 bits of microplastic — defined as smaller than 5 mm long (0.2 inch) — with 4.3 in the Arctic.

Last year, Chinese researchers suggested that mussels could be a global "bioindicator of microplastic pollution" because the molluscs live on the seabed where many plastics end up and, unlike fish, stay in the same place.

The impact of microplastics' on marine life or humans when eaten is unclear. Scientists suspect you would have to eat vast amounts of shellfish to be at risk, straining even Belgian diets where moules et frites (mussels and French fries) are a favorite dish.

"It's a warning signal that we need to do something about reducing the input of plastic to the ocean," Richard Thompson, a professor at Plymouth University and an expert on microplastics, told Reuters of the worldwide finds.

"It's a cause for concern at the moment rather than an alarm story for human consumption," he said. Almost 200 nations signed a UN resolution this month to eliminate plastic pollution in the seas, ranging from bottles to supermarket bags and food packaging, estimated at 8 million tonnes a year.

Thompson's research has shown that extremely high levels of plastics in the seabed can harm animals such as lugworms living in the seabed and build up in their tissues.

Most bits of plastic, however, simply pass through the guts of creatures from shellfish to humans. Thompson said human exposure to microplastics in seafood was likely to be below that from everyday plastics ranging from toys to fleece jackets.

China and the European Union are the top producers of farmed mussels in a global business worth $3 billion. And scientists want to find out if microplastics might cause mussels or oysters to make pearls - in nature often produced to combat natural irritants like sand.

Pearls might raise the value of some shellfish but also break the teeth of unlucky diners, Lusher said.—Reuters ■

Australia police say don't suspect terrorism after car ploughs into pedestrians

MELBOURNE — An Australian man of Afghan descent with a history of mental health issues drove a car into Christmas shoppers in the city of Melbourne on Thursday, injuring 19 people, but police said they did not believe the attack was terror-related.

In January, four people were killed and more than 20 injured when a man drove into pedestrians just a few hundred metres away from Thursday's attack. That too was not a terror attack. Jim Stoupas, the owner of a donut shop at the scene, told Reuters the vehicle was travelling up to 100 kph (62 mph) when it drove into the intersection packed with people, hitting one person after another.

"All you could hear was just 'bang bang bang bang bang' and screams," Stoupas said in a telephone interview, adding the car came to rest by a tram stop.

Police said they detained the 32-year-old driver, an Australian of Afghan descent with a history of assault, drug use and mental health issues.

"At this time, we don't have any evidence or intelligence to indicate a connection with terrorism," said the acting chief commissioner of Victoria State, Shane Patton. Four of the injured were in critical condition, including a pre-school aged boy who suffered a head injury. Police also detained a 24-year-old man at the scene who was filming the incident and had a bag with knives. Patton said it was "quite probable" the 24-year-old was not involved. The men had not been charged and their names have not been released by police. The attack took place on Flinders Street, a major road that runs alongside the Yarra River, in the central business district of Australia's second-biggest city.

Melbourne has installed about 140 concrete bollards in the city centre to stop vehicle attacks by militants similar to recent attacks in Europe and the United States. —Reuters ■

Japan cybersecurity survey finds 20,000 fake shopping sites

TOKYO — A cybersecurity survey has found that around 20,000 fake shopping sites were in operation in the second half of this year, Japan's National Police Agency said Thursday, warning that the sites are designed to swindle money from unsuspecting shoppers. Most of the websites use a hyperlink with a fake ad to lead victims to a scam site, the NPA said, based on the survey by the Japan Cybercrime Control Center involving information security and online service providers.

Typically, victims are led to the fake sites after using a search engine to look for information about a product they want to buy and clicking on a hyperlink including words such as "brand wristwatch, high quality." Products featured on malicious sites include not only luxury bags and watches but also general items and sporting goods. The websites tend to be written in unnatural Japanese, according to the center. In the period from July to earlier this month, there were 19,834 scam sites, the survey found. —Kyodo News ■

Aim is to create awareness, not earn money: Akshay on 'Padman'

MUMBAI — Actor Akshay Kumar today said with “Padman”, about a man who develops a low cost sanitary pads, they are trying to reach out to a wider audience without looking at the commercial aspects of the movie.

“With ‘Toilet: Ek Prem Katha’ we had shown it (film) on Doordarshan channel, the government is also doing a good job by taking the film in a pen-drive and showing it in villages so that more people can see the film and understand it.

“We will do something similar for this film (‘Padman’).

Our aim is not to earn money through the film but it should reach more people, more places where it is needed. We will also take the help of the government,” Akshay told reporters here at the song launch of “Padman”.

Akshay’s wife Twinkle, who is one of the producers of the film, said the team got in touch with various ministries about showing the film in schools in smaller towns and cities, to make more people aware about menstrual hygiene. “We would want the film to be shown to school girls and principals, so it penetrates where it has to. At least we are hoping a conversation starts where the same girls, who can’t afford a sanitary pad, would say to their parents that we don’t need fairness creams, we need sanitary pads so that we can go to schools.”

The makers today launched the song ‘Aaj Se Teri’ featuring Akshay and his on-screen wife Radhika Apte. The national award winning actor has been doing films like “Toilet: Ek Prem Katha” and “Padman”, focusing on social issues, and he said it is a deliberate move to be associated with such kind of cinema. “I do this (referring to social-real issue films) but at the same time I am also enjoying doing commercial cinema. I am also doing a film like ‘Houseful’. I have done all kinds of film, I love doing films. This (social issue) kind of cinema attracts me, it gives me satisfaction as an actor and as a human being”

Akshay is happy that people especially men have today openly started talking about sanitary pads, and hoped that post the release of “Padman”, things would only get better. “Three-four days back, I was sitting in a vanity van and while I was coming out, I saw seven-eight guys talking about sanitary pads. I was amazed. I am hopeful people will understand the importance of this subject.

He hoped the movie will help stop superstitions like not touching the pickle or entering the kitchen during one’s period.

“Padman” is directed by R Balki and it also stars Sonam Kapoor in a pivotal role. It will open in cinema houses on 26 January.

Microsoft co-founder Bill Gates took to social media to praise “Toilet: Ek Prem Katha” for promoting sanitation.

On this, the “Airlift” actor said, “I was on stage when I saw the name of Bill Gates. It is amazing. I feel more change... improvement is needed.

A year back, there were 54 per cent cases of open defecation and now not it has come down to 34 per cent, things are moving. “With this subject (menstrual hygiene) we got to know that 82 per cent women don’t use sanitary pads and with the help of everyone including the government, we hope the numbers come down.—PTI ■

Culture will be richer when ‘white dudes’ not in power: Bale

LOS ANGELES — Actor Christian Bale feels that “culture will be richer” when white men are not the only ones in charge of everything.

The “Dark Knight Rises” actor batted for a more inclusive Hollywood which can benefit everyone during a panel discussion with AOL Build to discuss his new film “Hostiles”.

“Our culture will be so much richer the day that we stop saying, ‘Hey, it’s all white dudes who are running things,’” Bale said.

“Whether that be Hollywood, whether that be Washington, you know. We’re going to get, in Hollywood, so much better films and so much more interesting stories being told and America will become the America that the rest of the world sees it as, that makes it unique,” he added.

The British-born actor also talked about his love for America, which he called “such a beautiful, brilliant country”, and moving his family there.

“It’s the reason I moved here, it’s the reason my kids have American accents. It’s because it is that, it’s a country of inclusion and invitation,” Bale said. Directed by Scott Cooper, “Hostiles” also features Rosamund Pike, Wes Studi, Jesse Plemons, Adam Beach, Rory Cochrane and Ben Foster.—PTI ■

Wailing fans bid farewell to lead singer of South Korean boy band SHINee

SEOUL — Grief-stricken fans braved Seoul’s winter cold on Thursday to bid farewell to Kim Jong-hyun, the lead singer of top South Korean boy band SHINee, who died in hospital in a suspected suicide.

Weeping, wailing and embracing one another, young men and women dressed in grey and black lined the road as the hearse carrying Kim’s coffin left the hospital.

“I am so sad that I cannot even cry. My heart aches so much”, 18-year-old Chinese fan Chen Jialin said.

Fellow singers, including SHINee’s Minho and members of bands Super Junior and Girls’ Generation, joined the funeral procession.

Kim, 27, was found unconscious next to burning briquettes on a frying pan inside a serviced residence in Seoul on Monday, police told Reuters.

Yonhap news agency had reported that the singer sent a final message to his sister asking her to “let me go”.

Kim spent nearly a decade as one of five members of SHINee, one of the most popular bands in the country, as well as a solo artist. His death was a massive blow to the worldwide fan base that Korea’s K-pop music has attracted in recent years.

K-pop is the rage in Asia and other continents, with a song by the group BTS maintaining a spot on the Billboard 200 for seven weeks as of the end of November.—Reuters ■

Romans decry 'Mangy', city's threadbare Christmas tree, as symbol of decline

ROME — Oh Christmas Tree, Oh Christmas Tree. How mangy are your branches! That could be Rome's version of the classic Christmas carol, which speaks instead of branches, lovely and steadfast.

Romans are up in arms over the tree that has been dubbed "Spelacchio". Roughly translated as mangy or baldy, the name given to the tree in the capital's Piazza Venezia has become a symbol of what many see as the eternal city's eternal decay.

"It's a disgrace. It hurts even to look at this Christmas tree," one Roman resident told Reuters Television, using an Italian term suggesting that it looked like a plucked chicken.

"How can they have put it in Rome, a capital city like Rome," said the woman, who declined to give her name.

Some have even likened "Spelacchio" to a toilet brush.

Many Romans on social media have pointed a finger at Mayor Virginia Raggi, a leading light in the anti-establishment 5-Star Movement, who has been getting negative seasons greetings because of the dire state of the city.

Raggi has tried to shrug off the uproar, saying the tree had been decorated in a "simple and refined" fashion.

Rome has fallen into disrepair and degradation in recent years, with streets full of pot holes, piles of garbage and unkempt public gardens where weeds grow as tall as a person.

Even Pope Francis has decried the decay.

Any hope that this year's 20-metre (65-ft)-high tree could bring some Christmas cheer faded quickly.

"It is clearly dead and it represents a shameful spectacle for citizens and tourists," said the consumers' group Codacons.

Codacons called for investigation into why nearly 50,000 euros ($60,000) was spent to transport the sickly tree to Rome from a forest near the Austrian border 700 km (430 miles) away.

"The one at the Vatican is much better. They should swap them," said Francois Mallet, a tourist from France.

Romans pointedly enviously to the fine Christmas tree put up in the heart of the northern city of Milan, seeing it as another sign of how the Italian financial capital has overtaken the nation's official capital in terms of wealth and prestige.

The saga of "Spelacchio" has taken off on social media, with its own hashtag and handle on Twitter. "Farewell @spelacchio," tweeted Duccio Zanaboni. "It was nice while it lasted. It's a shame it didn't last long. RIP" —Reuters ■

Retiro park: Madrid's green lung

MADRID — On a cold winter morning, Madrid's Retiro park is filled with joggers and dog walkers enjoying the fresh air and manicured flowerbeds of one of the city's most visited attractions.

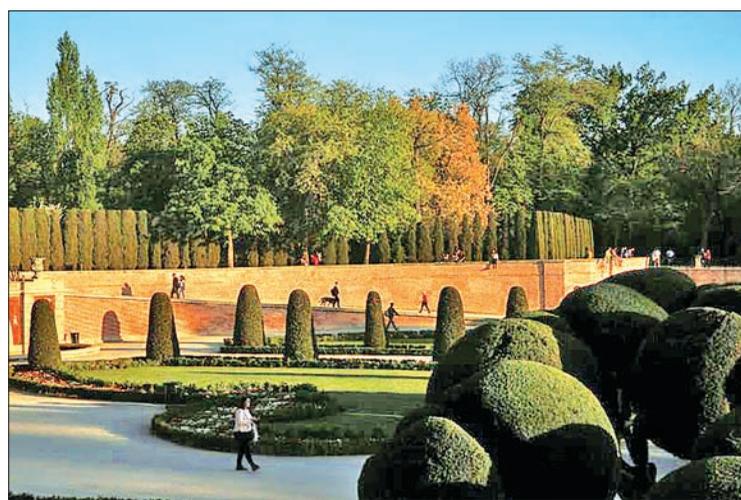

El Retiro ("The Retreat") was originally a palace and gardens built for the personal enjoyment of King Felipe IV in the 17th Century, where courtiers sometimes carried out recreations of naval battles on the boating lake.

Nearly 400 years later, the 1.4-square kilometer (350-acre) park is used for boat rides, an annual book fair and road races.

It has a garden with over 4,000 rosebushes which fill the air with scent when the flowers bloom in May and June, and the "Palacio de Cristal" built in 1887, a glass and iron structure inspired by London's Crystal Palace.

The park is enjoyed by "madrilenos" and tourists alike.

"This is a beautiful park, particularly for couples, it's very romantic," said Flora Werner, a 28-year-old Londoner visiting with her boyfriend.

"I like it better than (London's) Hyde Park because it's less hectic, people here seem to be more relaxed," she said as she took selfies of herself kissing her partner beside the boating lake.

The Retiro is also a place of work for many. Nicolas Perez has worked for four years dressing as cartoon characters like Kermit the Frog and getting his picture taken with visitors for money.

Business is best over the weekend, says the 45-year-old Ecuadorean.

"From Monday to Thursday I make enough to pay for food. But on Friday and the weekend I get extra to pay for my utilities," he said.—Reuters ■

Australia finds wreck of first Allied submarine to sink in World War One

SYDNEY — Australia has discovered the wreck of its first submarine off the coast of Papua New Guinea, authorities said on Thursday, resolving one of the country's oldest naval mysteries after more than a century.

The submarine, AE-1, was the first Allied vessel to sink during World War One, while patrolling for German warships in 1914, in circumstances that have never been established.

The Australian Navy and several private bodies found the final resting place of the vessel's 35 crew on their 13th attempt, Defence Minister Marise Payne told media. The submarine's disappearance "was a tragedy for our then fledgling nation,"

Payne said, adding that a small commemorative service was held aboard the survey ship that found the wreck and authorities were trying to contact the crew's descendants.

"It is my hope that what we have done in the last couple of days will now provide relief to the family and descendants of all of those members," said navy chief Vice Admiral Timmy Barrett, adding that the crew had come from Australia, Britain and New Zealand. The authorities did not disclose the wreck's location, except to say it was found off the Duke of York Islands. The governments of Australia and Papua New Guinea said they planned to preserve the site.—Reuters ■

Man United knocked out by Bristol City in League Cup shock

LONDON — Bristol City, from English football's second-tier, pulled off a sensation in the League Cup quarter-finals as they knocked out the holders Manchester United 2-1 amid late and wholly improbable drama at their Ashton Gate home on Wednesday.

On one of the great nights in the Championship club's 123-year history, City despatched the Premier League giants amid ecstatic scenes with a winner three minutes into stoppage time from Corey Smith. English champions Chelsea also defeated Bournemouth 2-1 in a dramatic finish at Stamford Bridge to join Arsenal and Manchester City in a high-quality semi-final lineup.

Jose Mourinho's much-changed United, even with big guns Zlatan Ibrahimovic and Paul Pogba back in their starting lineup, found it a trying night and had their work cut out after Joe Bryan had put City ahead with a superb 51st-minute strike.

Ibrahimovic, who hit the woodwork in the first half, thundered home a low freekick to restore parity seven minutes later but City kept believing and made United the fourth Premier League victims of their marvellous Cup run when Smith turned to fire home their last-gasp goal in the final seconds.

Chelsea looked set to be comfortable winners over struggling Premier League opposition when Willian finished off a fine team move after just 13 minutes but Bournemouth rallied after the break. Dan Gosling smashed home a deserved equaliser in the final minute but Chelsea
