CARDINAL Charles Maung Bo, Archbishop of Yangon, Myanmar, prayed for a Christmas of Love and Peace for every country men and women in his Christmas wish for the Union.

“A very blessed Christmas Wishes to all of you. Let all beings be soaked in peace,” he prayed.

bringing great joy and celebration. Despite all the challenges he visited all stake holders in the country, urging all to continue the pilgrimage of peace.

He has left to the church and the nation an urgent task : Heal the wounds, seek comprehensive reconciliation, repay hatred with redemptive love.”

“Genuine Peace is built on Love. This is the message of Pope Francis’ visit. Compassionate love needs to become the common religion of this nation. Religions need to come together for peace,” Charles Maung Bo mentioned in his Christmas wish.

“Let us creatively visualize a nation of hope. Christmas is that season hope. I pray for blessings on each one of us, that we can mobilize our spiritual instincts towards building Myanmar as a nation of opportunity, peace, love and healing to all of us,” he said.

About 650 star tortoises conserved at Shweseztaw Wildlife Sanctuary

POPULATION of star tortoises is rising and about 650 star tortoises are under captive-breeding programme at Shweseztaw Wildlife Sanctuary in Minbu Township, Magway Township, according to a recent report of Myawady Daily.

Wildlife sanctuary is their natural habitat but they are critically on the verge of extinction. In 1996, six male and six female star tortoises were conserved, and now, the number of star tortoises has reached about 650.

In a bid to conserve the endangered star tortoises, the state granted allocated fund for breeding programme. Health care of tortoises is provided by Wildlife Conservation Society (WCS Myanmar Programme) working with Turtle Survival Alliance.

they are conserved at Shweseztaw Wildlife Sanctuary, Natogyi Township, Mandalay Region, Lawkananda Wildlife Sanctuary in Bagan. Shweseztaw Wildlife Sanctuary is over 100,000 square mile wide, preserving 14 species of mammals, 43 species of reptiles, 113 species of birds, 39 species of butterflies, 89 species of plants and 26 species of medicinal plants. -GNLM ■

Online booking system for vehicle inspection, registration

THE Road Transport Administration Department will introduce an online booking system to carry out the inspection of registered vehicles in Yangon starting on 2 January.

However, the inspection processes for vehicles from other regions and states, changes to colour and name and motorbikes remain unchanged. The department is taking measures for the smooth functioning of vehicle registration as people face delays due to traffic jams caused by the long line of vehicles.

According to official figures issued by the Road Transport Administration Department, 999,101 motor vehicles have been registered nationwide. Of the total, more than 530,000 cars are in Yangon, accounting for 53.28 % of the total registered cars.

For those wishing to use the online booking system in five offices in Yangon may register their names at www.rtad.gov.mm starting from 27 December.—Myanmar News Agency ■

Local recruitment agency invites skilled workers abroad to return home

WITH foreign direct investments flowing into Myanmar, online recruitment agency JobNet.com.mm is inviting the skilled workers of professional level working abroad to come back mother country, according to news released by the Jobnet.com.mm.

According to 2017 business survey of Myanmar, business confidence of the country is seen a sharp decline to 49 per cent from 73 per cent of last year. Shortage of skilled workers contributes to decline of business confidence level.

JobNet is trying to offer job opportunities to persuade them to work in the country. According to its survey, more than 110,000 visitors to their website are monthly recorded. Of them, 10 per cent are from foreign countries. Mr Matt De Luca, from Jobnet.com.mm said that more job opportunities will emerge as the country is putting forth efforts to the development of economy. Shortage of workers is one of the challenges. The local workers need to meet criteria of job vacancies.

Accounting and financial management is the most popular categories for job hunters who visited the website this year. The visitors also search job vacancies in engineering and other sectors. -GNLM ■

Myanmar Pharmaceutical Factory (MPF) carries out research activities. PHOTO: MINISTRY OF INDUSTRY

MPF conducting research to produce ten more new products this FY

May Thet Hnin

RESEARCH activities are being carried out by the state-owned Myanmar Pharmaceutical Factory (MPF), formerly known as Burma Pharmaceutical Industry (BPI) in order to manufacture more than ten products this Fiscal Year, said U Ko Ko Aung, the managing director of MPF.

“Our pharmaceutical production is still in a fragile state and so, we are endeavouring to boost output”, he added.

MPF is conducting the research for production of around 12 new products including medications to relief cancer pain, anti-HIV drug and drugs prescribed for heart disease.

MPF can fulfill only 10 per cent of national requirement and total pharmaceutical production of local factories is still less than 15 per cent of the requirement. Most of pharmaceuticals are imported, said U Ko Ko Aung.

During last FY, MPF's output estimated Ks 28 to 30 billion. Production value this FY increased up to Ks50 billion.

There are two pharmaceutical factories- Myanmar Pharmaceutical Factory (MPF) Insein and Kyaukse. MPF provides a total of 287 products and is making efforts to improve new products. Last FY saw 12 new products by MPF.

U Ko Ko Aung suggested that people should raise awareness of counterfeit drugs under the name of BPI brand and prescription mixed with expired drugs. And so, public need to take a special care to check the bearing of BPI brand in the FILM coated tablets and expired date.

A collaborative inspection such as surprise check was made by Special Investigation Bureau of the Ministry of Home Affairs and MPF under the Ministry of Industry at drugstores, warehouses and drug producing factories in September 2016. Fake BPI tablets, vials and ointments with estimated value of Ks2.8 billion were seized. ■

Laboratory to test fuel oil quality to start to run next month

A laboratory for testing of fuel oil quality established by Myanmar Fuel Oil Importers and Distributors Association will start to operate in January, 2018, said Dr Win Myint, secretary of this association.

“Our aim is to ensure the quality of fuel oil both for the consumers and businessmen”, he continued.

This laboratory is constructed in Thilawa Special Economic Zone and it will examine quality of imported fuel oil and fuel oil distributed in the market.

“We led to get public participation. Most of the companies agreed to be tested their fuel oil. We will give certificate to those companies, ensuring the quality to the consumers. It also intends to scale down the number of those fuel stations which sell the mixed oil”, said Dr Win Myint.

The consumers can come to laboratory for practical testing besides those respective persons from companies and petrol stations.

The charges for laboratory test are less than a Kyat for a gallon.

Major volume of the imported oil is of quality but the unscrupulous sellers mixed them with locally produced oil and sell them at a bargain price.

Ninety per cent of domestic consumption of fuel oil is heavily reliant on foreign market while only 10 per cent of that are from locally produced.

There are around 70 fuel oil import companies and 2,000 fuel stations, mostly imported through Singapore. Around 200,000 tons of gasoline and 400,000 tons of diesel are monthly imported into the country.—May Thet Hnin ■

BUILDING its own ships which meet the standard of boats sailing in the open seas is an honour for the Tatmadaw (Navy). Also the Tatmadaw in indeed is honourable as it is the only armed forces in Southeast Asia that can build frigates at its own dockyard. This ability must be maintained while building more powerful naval boats, said Commander-in-Chief of Defence Services Senior General Min Aung Hlaing at the commissioning of the naval vessels in commemoration of the 70th anniversary of the Tatmadaw (Navy) held in Yangon yesterday.

Effective exploitation of our valuable touristic sites

MYANMAR is a country with fertile lands, a mild climate, natural beautiful scenery and abundant natural resources and touristic sites. Compared to neighboring countries apart from needs in urban development and essential services, Myanmar has a great number of ancient historical sites and places of interest to tourists like Bagan, the Majestic Shwedagon Pagoda in Yangon Region, the Royal Palace in Mandalay, ancient Buddhist temples in Mrauk U (Rakhine state) and beautiful beaches like Napali in Thandwe (Rakhine state) and Ngwe Saung and Chaung Tha beaches of Ayeyarwaddy Region to mention but a few. Therefore we realize that much needs to be done to upgrade the hospitality industry for the promotion of tourism and travel industry in Myanmar.

In 2016 over 2.9 million tourists across the world visited Myanmar while 3.1 million visitors arrived in Myanmar up to the end of October this year, increasing by 20 percent compared to a similar period of previous years. Yet, it has not reached a satisfactory stage compared with enormous amounts of tourist influx to neighboring countries and ASEAN nations.

As regards tourist arrivals from foreign countries, the Myanmar tourism industry is neither in a stagnant position nor in decline. Therefore reforms need to be made, focusing on regular customers. After making a careful assessment of certain countries which have a high incidence of potential customers, we can have a massive influx of foreign tourists by adopting sound marketing strategies.

The following actions may be relevant in promoting tourism to Myanmar—making better arrangements in giving out arrival visas at our airports, letting international airlines land directly, making preparations for global flights to land in major locations of tourist attraction, allowing countries designated as tourism markets to be regarded as visa-free countries and carrying out these tasks in cooperation and collaboration with the respective departments and Union ministries.

In the development of tourism, safe travel to any of the tourism sites is of vital importance. As the tourism industry depends upon the image of the country, arrangements should be made to improve tourism areas in terms of road networks, clean and customer-friendly rest places and places for free internet access so that the national image can be improved. In case events occur which have a negative impact on the national image, effective corrective actions need to be taken so that such events will not occur again in the future.

On the other hand, to attract a massive influx of tourists it is necessary to pay more attention to marketing and public relations. We will need to find ways and means so that interested world travelers will see our advertisements on popular TV channels or on Youtube channels. Much can be learnt from how other ASEAN countries are making their tourism destinations popular to world class travelers.

Convenient transportation, attractive accommodations with modern facilities at reasonable prices for visitors, and better arrangements for the existing tour packages are some of the things that come to mind for the improvement of this sector. Being a smokeless industry, the hotel and tourism sector can create job opportunities and earn huge sums of foreign exchange for the national economy. To sum it up, we deeply urge responsible personnel from every sector to collectively take part in the campaign for the development of tourism industries.

Need to Collectively Cooperate in Eradicating Trafficking in Persons

By May Thet Hnin

“EVERY individual may be a victim of human trafficking, regardless of age or sex, that is, adults or minors and males or females. According to the statistics, amounts of the cases are increasing year by year in the country, but many went unreported and unlisted,” said by Naw Kue Kue, a freelance consultant who started to devote herself since about 1990, as regards human-trafficking offences.

In the years—2015 and 2016 there were nearly 130 cases of human trafficking in the country, with 209 cases in all registered from January 2017 to November, according to the news release of anti-human trafficking forces, Myanmar. This year, 334 in total comprising of men, women and children were victimized by human traffickers. Among them 54 were in Yangon, most of all, followed by 52 in Shan State, 29 in Kachin State, 18 in Ayeyarwady Region and 14 in Mandalay Region, with 609 culprits who were involved in trafficking arrested, according to the statistics.

Naw Kue Kue added, “The government is mainly the most important. In the past there was not any law on trafficking and it was then difficult to accept even the wording, human trafficking. Later on, though some progress was achieved due to MoUs and action plans among countries it did not yet cover over the whole country. There are still many victims of human trafficking in the country. To put it simply, it is dreadful to think about those being tortured in many ways.”

Those trafficked to China were involved with forced marriages, with illegal migrant workers in Thailand becoming involved into sexual slavery by force. In Malaysia, those came from Thailand, after being seduced into sex slavery. Out of them children were made to work in begging for money. Moreover, it was learnt that most of them were employed at lower wages in hard labors such as housemaids, factories, mining sites, deep sea fishing, farming plantation, waiter and waitress services and other low-paid jobs.

Political instability, differences in development and an enormous gap between rich and poor are closely related. Being out of reach toward the legal route toward foreign countries for work, becoming easy preys to fraudulent people and fewer advantages of job opportunities in their locations are the very basic causes of trafficking in ing to know that forced labor also belonged to the human trafficking group. She also added that other matters similar to human trafficking which are happening in the country should be taken into consideration specifically. She added, “Now, people mostly pay attention to cross border. In fact matters similar to human trafficking are increasing more than ever in the country, it was learnt. It should be dealt with persons. Some experts conclude that human traffickers chose this job and it increased rapidly day by day because it does not need much money to invest for the job, easy to be implemented and the job can be carried out promptly through the use of modern information technology.

“Due to the increasing rate of human trafficking, the Government, Parliaments, civil societies, social organizations and the whole populace should cooperate in the campaigns against human trafficking,” said activists in anti-trafficking in persons.

Naw Kue Kue said that the government, the people and all social societies from ward and village level to the national level need to cooperate in harmony with each other.

Daw Micky Kyaw Myint, Senior Officer of Asia Foundation sharing knowledge on human trafficking among the people in combination with colorful girls consisting of Myanmar Library Association and young girls, said that most people thought human trafficking as sex trafficking, in conducting lectures to them, fail-more emphasis.”

Police officer of no 6 human-trafficking suppression team, anti-human-trafficking police force, U Khin Maung Kywe said, “Our forces are carrying out our duties as a national cause across the country after finding out those involved in human trafficking to take action against them. But it is necessary for respective departments and the whole populace should protect themselves from dangers with awareness.”

For eradication of trafficking in persons, the government formed the human trafficking suppression police forces, arresting those involved in local and border cross human trafficking under Myanmar Human Trafficking Law 2005. The law was being amended, likely to come out in early 2018.

Anti-Trafficking in Person Police Force are cooperating with the Governments of China and Thailand for fighting against human-trafficking offences, opening liaison offices. Besides, Myanmar is speeding up the cooperation with 6 Mekong Basin Regions’ nations and ASEAN countries for eradication of the human trafficking.

Social Welfare Department, global organizations, NGOs, civilian associations and ward or village-tract-orientated social societies are helping in the respective sectors by sharing knowledge on prevention from human trafficking and helping in suing against culprits involved in the crimes.

“Rehabilitation is the most difficult part and it costs too much money. Techniques also are too sober to deal with the cases. We cannot guess how much the trafficking hurt the victims. Kinds of trafficking are different, so it will be different as to how they are to be cured. And, some people welcome them warmly on their arrival back, with some failing to accept them warmly. What they urgently need is a warm and helpful social environment. Taking too much time in finding out accurate information and solid evidences & offences of bribery and corruption of some fraudulent judicial staff in suing culprits in courts are also challenges we are facing,” said Naw Kue Kue.

U Khin Maung Kywe asserted, “Besides the Central Committee for Prevention of Human Trafficking, different-level committees were formed in Regions and States, Districts and Town-persons is a grave offence, being a kind of exploitation by violating human rights, hence the need for all people to energetically take part in the operation. As for the authorities at wards and villages they need to lend their ears to happenings in their surroundings and report to authorities concerning suspects, if ever. As such cases start to be dealt with at the district-level courts of justice so townships judges are required to stand before the courts, but some would not like to. Similarly police forces in the jurisdiction area are also important. For the time being, anti-trafficking suppression police forces cannot be stationed at every police station. In case, an offence occurs and they must inform by phone. Cooperation between police is urgently needed.”

In the law on trafficking in persons, it is strictly prescribed that a person who commits an offence to women and children are required to be sentenced to 10 years imprisonment or life imprisonment and fined. If committed to males, the culprit can be sentenced to 5 years to 10 years imprisonment plus fine punishment. If the offence is committed by the group of three and above, the culprits must be 20 years to life imprisonment. In case a culprit commits an of-ships since 2011, consisting of heads of the general administration departments, judicial officers, judges, IMPD, department of labor, education officers, IPRD, women affairs associations and maternity and child care associations and anti-trafficking suppression police forces. But, until now cooperation between each other is still unsatisfactory.”

He added, “Trafficking in fence punishable to 4 years imprisonment, while committing the human trafficking he can be sentenced to 10 years imprisonment to death sentence. Arrangement or attempt or collusion or organization or act of abetting or provision of monetary support to commit an offence included in human trafficking prevention law are committed and they will be given the punishments as prescribed in the law.

Naw Kue Kue said, “It needs to arrest the actual culprit. Generally the ones who actually commit crimes went un-arrested. It is a great challenge in judicial sector.”

According to anti-trafficking-in-persons suppression police forces, human traffickers persuaded victims by saying that they would be employed at factories, shops, house-maid jobs or caring for the aged with well-paid salaries and money would be remitted to their parents just on arrival at the other land. Some were persuaded by saying that they would get between K 1 or 1 ½ million just by living together with a Chinese national for six months or one year at the utmost.

In the Myanmar Human Trafficking Report, 2006, it was strictly described that cases concerning human trafficking which broke out in the country can be seen as 7 categories. They are 69.7 percent of forced marriage, 13.6 percent of sex slavery, 10 percent of forced labor, 4.8 percent of child human trafficking, 1.4 percent of forcing enslaved children to beg, 0.3 percent of forced adoption and 0.2 percent of commercial sexual exploitation respectively.

Out of cross border human trafficking, 80 percent had been sent to China, with 10 percent to Thailand, 6 percent to Malaysia and 4 percent in the country respectively. Among the victims, 85 percent had been learnt to be women, with 4.38 percent of children.

U Khin Maung Kywe said, “Most of victims were illiterates and naive ones. Some became cheated by others while trying to hunt for higher career. Human traffickers are waiting for those who would fall for their trap. It needs not to easily trust anyone—friends, boyfriends and even relatives. If there is a doubt, anyone should consult with knowledgeable ones.”

Hot numbers for informing news and information about human trafficking in the country are as follows:

09 49 555 666; 09 49 555 777; 09 49 555 888 and 09 49 555 999.

Myanmar Announces ADB-Backed Reforms to Improve Business Climate

THE new Companies Law adopts international best practices on company formation, business registration process, corporate governance, and lifts the threshold on foreign ownership.

The Government of Myanmar announced recently the passage of the Myanmar Companies Law, one of key reforms to improve the country’s business environment supported by the Asian Development Bank (ADB).

“Along with the recently revised Myanmar Investment Law, this reform represents an important step toward creating an enabling business environment in Myanmar,” said Duong Nguyen, an ADB Financial Sector Economist. “ADB has supported these efforts since 2012 as private sector development is the key driver of inclusive growth as it increases productivity, generates jobs, and stimulates investment.”

The new Companies Law adopts international best practices on company formation, business registration process, corporate governance, and lifts the threshold on foreign ownership.

ADB, with funding from the Government of Japan, has supported these efforts through a $1.5 million technical assistance grant approved in 2014. This grant has provided assistance to Directorate of Investment and Company Administration (DICA) to draft the new company law, and to conduct public consultations, advocacy, and public education on the law. In addition, the grant will procure an electronic company registry, train DICA staff to administer the registry, and assist DICA with re-registration of enterprises.

The new law and registry will simplify and reduce the cost of incorporating a business in Myanmar, and thereby support private sector investment. Small- and medium-sized enterprises will also benefit from a more transparent and lower-cost registration system.

“The new law will provide an opportunity for small businesses to formalize, and thus gain better access to finance and public services,” said Ms. Duong. “Moreover, an improved investment environment will support inclusive economic growth through increased enterprise startups and subsequent jobs generation.”

ADB, based in Manila, is dedicated to reducing poverty in Asia and the Pacific through inclusive economic growth, environmentally sustainable growth, and regional integration. Established in 1966, ADB is celebrating 50 years of development partnership in the region. It is owned by 67 members—48 from the region. In 2016, ADB assistance totaled $31.7 billion, including $14 billion in co-financing.—ADB ■

Life a dynamic force

Life is an awesome, resilient and dynamic force. We should not make it stagnant by restricting its unique flow, So that it can be spontaneous with its glittering glow. No forces in the world should be allowed to make it go slow, No interruptions should be allowed to set up a negative row. We should treat life as a as an exciting thrill, So that sadness can never silence its thrill. Life should be looked as bliss from the heaven, Joys and sadness are two parts of it; that will always happen. Life should be triumphant at every instances of the journey, It should be remembered as a joy ride and not a perilous journey. Life is a thrilling force, It should be enjoyed and not passed in remorse.

Peru opposition leader skeptical president's victory will last

LIMA — Peruvian President Pedro Pablo Kuczynski's political troubles will likely continue despite his surprise victory over a bid in Congress to oust him this week, a key opposition leader said on Saturday, citing ongoing graft probes and opposing demands from allies.

Jose Chlimper, secretary general of the right-wing Popular Force, said his party could eventually emerge stronger from this week's political crisis, despite failing to garner enough votes in the 130-member Congress to remove Kuczynski from office.

"For us having 71 lawmakers was an asset but also a liability. Because whatever Congress did was our fault," Chlimper told Reuters in a rare interview.

The party, which grew out of the populist movement of imprisoned ex-president Alberto Fujimori, sought to remove Kuczynski from office this week over business links he once denied having to a company at the centre of a massive graft scandal.

Ten Popular Force lawmakers broke ranks to keep a "presidential vacancy" motion from succeeding. Chlimper called the defections a painful "betrayal" but said the rest of Popular Force lawmakers have reaffirmed their commitment to staying in the party and voting as a bloc.

Kuczynski, on the other hand, could see the cross-party alliance that defended him this week evaporate going forward, said Chlimper. "I don't see how he can come out stronger," he said.

Chlimper said Kuczynski lured the rebel Popular Force lawmakers with a promise to free their movement's political leader, Fujimori, from prison - an accusation denied by Kuczynski's government.

The dissident faction was led by Fujimori's youngest son, Kenji, who has challenged his sister Keiko's leadership of their father's following and who could receive a boost if the once-popular patriarch is released from prison.

Let me come back, Catalan leader tells Spain

BRUSSELS — Catalonia's separatist leader Carles Puigdemont called on Spain's government on Saturday to allow him to return home in time for the opening session of the Catalan parliament so that he can become the region's next president.

Puigdemont, who ruled in Catalonia until October and faces arrest in Spain for his role in organising an illegal referendum on independence and proclaiming a Catalan republic, is currently in self-imposed exile in Belgium.

Separatist parties secured a parliamentary majority in a regional election on Thursday, though it is still unclear whether Puigdemont and other jailed leaders of the movement will be able to attend assembly sessions.

"I want to come back to Catalonia as soon as possible. I would like to come back right now. It would be good news for Spain," Puigdemont told Reuters in an interview.

Asked if he would be back in time for the opening session which has to take place at the latest on 23 January, he said: "It would be natural. If I am not allowed to be sworn in as president, it would be a major abnormality for the Spanish democratic system."

"I am the president of the regional government and I will remain the president if the Spanish state respects the results of the vote," he also said. Puigdemont, who has called for dialogue with the Spanish government to resolve the current tensions between the turbulent region and the authorities in Madrid, said he was ready to listen to any proposal from Prime Minister Mariano Rajoy even if this offer fell short of an offer of independence.

"If the Spanish state has a proposal for Catalonia, we should listen," Puigdemont said, asking for a dialogue of equals.

Rajoy on Friday said he was open to dialogue but implicitly rejected Puigdemont's demand to meet soon, saying he would talk with whoever was Catalonia's president only once they have been elected by the new regional parliament.

Before that, his first interlocutor should be Ines Arrimadas, whose centrist, anti-independence party scored most votes on Thursday, he said. Arrimadas does not have enough seats or allies to form a government, while separatist parties put together have a narrow majority.

Past calls for dialogue on both the separatist and unionist side in the past have failed to yield concrete results and the crisis is likely to keep haunting Madrid, as well as EU leaders, for a long time.

Negotiations to form a government in Catalonia are likely to open after 6 January following the holiday break. Parliament must vote by 8 February on putting a new government into place. —Reuters ■

Libyan PM says elections can solve political crisis

TRIPOLI — Libya's UN-backed Prime Minister Fayez Serraj said Saturday that holding elections can solve the political crisis in the country.

Serraj made his remarks during a meeting with the Italian Foreign Minister Angelino Alfano in the capital Tripoli.

Serraj said that the Libyan Election Commission has started registration of voters and preparing for the elections next year, after approving the election law and voting on a constitution for the country, according to the prime minister's media office.

Serraj also said that rejection of certain parties to the political process "complicates the scene, which calls for firm stances from the international community."

German would-be partners have very different immigration ideas

BERLIN — Leading figures from Angela Merkel's conservatives and the Social Democrats (SPD) outlined differing visions on how their possible government would approach immigration, as Germany's would-be coalition partners prepared for talks in the New Year.

Chancellor Merkel's 2015 decision to open the doors to more than a million migrants, many fleeing war in the Middle East, transformed Germany's demographic landscape and boosted the far right, hurting her bloc and the SPD in September's election.

In separate interviews, Thomas Strobl, deputy leader of Merkel's Christian Democrats (CDU) and SPD foreign minister Sigmar Gabriel outlined ways of winning back disenchanted supporters.

Strobl told the Heilbronner Stimme newspaper Germany should cap the number of new immigrants at 65,000 a year, the level in 2012, and far below the limit of 200,000 that the conservatives had previously advocated.

But Gabriel, whose party's restive membership would be unlikely to accept such a draconian cap, suggested municipalities around Germany and Europe could be compensated financially if they agreed to shelter refugees.

"That way municipalities would decide themselves how many refugees to take," he told the Funke newspaper group. "That would avoid citizens gaining the impression that refugees get everything and we get nothing."

Germany has argued in vain for the stream of migrants fleeing war and poverty in the Middle East and Africa to be divided proportionately between the European Union's member states, with poorer, more ethnically homogenous eastern members particularly set against the idea.

"The EU could establish a programme to help municipalities in poorer countries with the financing," Gabriel added.

Merkel, for whom a renewed conservative-SPD 'grand coalition' is her best chance of securing a fourth term as chancellor, has blamed her 24 September election losses on concern at migration and now favours a tougher stance on deporting migrants accused of crimes.

The SPD's membership, which must ratify any government deal, is cautious about repeating the experience of a grand coalition, for which voters rewarded it with a drubbing in the polling booths.

While Gabriel is not a member of the SPD's negotiating team, his proposal could prove popular with the party's broadly more pro-European rank-and-file, and especially with party leader Martin Schulz, a former European Parliament president.

In a further sign the centre-left party is trying to distinguish itself from the conservatives, party deputy chairman Hubertus Heil said the next government should allocate 12 billion euros (£10.6 billion) more to education over the next four years. The money was needed to fund investment in digital learning methods, he told newspaper Bild am Sonntag, insisting that the federal government had to play a bigger role in education, traditionally a state-level competency.

Exploratory talks between the parties are due to begin on 7 January, and Merkel hopes to reach a deal by mid-January. —Reuters ■

France ready to strengthen force in Sahel fighting Islamists — Macron

PARIS — President Emmanuel Macron said on Saturday France stood ready if needed to strengthen its military force fighting alongside African troops against Islamist insurgents in the Sahel.

France has been seeking to eventually withdraw from the poorly policed scrublands of the Sahel region — which abuts the Sahara to the north and has become a recruiting and training ground for Islamist militants — with the help of a new regional African force. The G5 Sahel, which began official operations in November, is made up of troops from Mali, Niger, Chad, Burkina Faso and Mauritania that will patrol the region in collaboration with 4,000 French troops deployed there since intervening in 2013 to quell an insurgency in northern Mali. But Macron said on a visit to the Niger capital Niamey that the Sahel would remain a focus for the French army, should it be required in the future.

"France is ready, not only to maintain, but if necessary to strengthen its engagement in the region because the fight against terrorism in the Sahel is essential, in my opinion," he said during a joint news conference with his Nigerian counterpart Mahamoudou Issoufou.

"The fight is not won today ... it is essential not only to maintain but to further improve our agility on the ground, to innovate more and to focus our priorities on the regions identified as the most vulnerable," he added.

Speaking during his visit to Niger, Macron also announced an additional 10 million euros to help educate girls, one of the priorities promoted by President Issoufou to curb migration.

This sum is on top of 15 million euros already invested by France to help education in Niger. Paris pledged in mid-December to spend 400 million euros over 2017-2021 to support Niamey. —Reuters ■

Swiss president wants a vote to clarify country's EU position

ZURICH — A referendum in Switzerland to clarify the country's relationship with the European Union would be helpful, Swiss President Doris Leuthard said on Sunday, after ties between the two sides cooled this week.

Switzerland's frictions with the EU, of which it is not a member, arise as Britain negotiates its withdrawal from the bloc following a referendum in June last year and seeks a new trading relationship with its closest neighbours.

Talks on securing a new "framework" treaty to govern the Swiss-EU relationship have been underway for some time, with Brussels wanting to replace the more than 100 bilateral accords which regulate its relationship with Bern. But relations soured this week when the EU granted Swiss stock exchanges only limited access to the bloc, prompting Swiss threats of retaliation for what it called discrimination.

"The bilateral path is important," Leuthard told Swiss newspapers Sonntags Blick. "We therefore have to clarify our relationship with Europe. We have to know in which direction to go.

"Therefore a fundamental referendum would be helpful."

Talks on the an all-encompassing agreement made headway last month after Switzerland agreed to increase its contribution to the EU's budget.

Such a deal would ensure Switzerland adopts relevant EU laws in return for enhanced access to the bloc's single market, crucial for Swiss exports.

But a deal would be opposed by the anti-EU Swiss People's Party (SVP), currently the biggest group in parliament.

Leuthard, who steps down as president at the end of the year, said the latest row had not overshadowed her year in the rotating office. "Of course, the differences with Brussels are now in focus. Here our attitude is clear — for the EU to link such a technical thing like stock exchange equivalency with a political question like the framework treaty, that is not possible."

She said some countries were putting Switzerland in the same category as Britain, while others wanted to strengthen their own financial centres at Switzerland's expense. "Others think we are cherry pickers who benefit too much from the single European market, they want to increase pressure for a framework agreement," Leuthard said. Pressure from outside would did not contribute to a beneficial climate in Switzerland over a potential agreement, she said. She said she understood Swiss scepticism towards the EU, but there was no alternative to finding an accommodation with the bloc which generates around two thirds of Swiss trade.

"We can strengthen the cooperation with India and China, but the EU remains central. We need a mechanism and regulated relationship with the EU, that would also prevent political games like we are having at the moment," Leuthard said. —Reuters ■

Russia's ruling party seeks Putin's 'ultimate victory' at 2018 election

MOSCOW — Russia's ruling party United Russia wants the "ultimate victory" of President Vladimir Putin at the presidential election in March, party head and Prime Minister Dmitry Medvedev said on Saturday.

Putin, 65, said earlier this month he would run for re-election as a self-nominated candidate, in a contest he seems sure to win comfortably, extending his grip on power into a third decade.

Speaking at an annual gathering of United Russia, Medvedev said the party was Putin's party, and his key political resource.

Medvedev promised it would support Putin in the election, which is scheduled for 18 March.

"We will give you, Vladimir Vladimirovich, all possible support, now and in the future," said Medvedev, addressing Putin by his first and patronymic names. Putin has been in power since 2000 either as president or prime minister.

If he wins what would be a fourth presidential term, he will be eligible to serve another six years until 2024, when he turns 72.

Putin thanked Medvedev for the support and announced some goals for the future, such as higher economic growth and better healthcare.

"We need to achieve a long-range steady increase in real incomes of citizens, to increase pensions and social support," he said.—Reuters ■

Venezuelan truth commission recommends release of 80 convicted prisoners

CARACAS — More than 80 prisoners convicted of violent crimes during anti-government protests in 2014 and 2017 could be released soon, Venezuela's truth commission said on Saturday.

Delcy Rodriguez, president of the National Constituent Assembly (ANC) and its Commission for Public Justice, Peace and Tranquility, said the group has recommended that President Nicolas Maduro release certain inmates. "We have recommended (conditional) pardons for more than 80 people, both to the criminal justice system and the president, and we are hoping it becomes effective in the coming hours," said Rodriguez.

The commission was created in August on the suggestion of the president's office to investigate protests sparked this year as well as the violence that marked the right-wing opposition's protest movement in 2014, known as "The Exit," which aimed to topple Maduro and the ruling socialist party. "The commission has carried out exhaustive reviews of each criminal proceeding in the past four months," said Rodriguez. Those pardoned will be expected to appear before the commission "to acknowledge the victims," and agree to perform "community service" in lieu of serving jail time, she added.—Xinhua ■

North Korea says new UN sanctions an act of war

BEIJING/SEOUL — The latest UN sanctions against North Korea are an act of war and tantamount to a complete economic blockade against it, North Korea's foreign ministry said on Sunday, threatening to punish those who supported the measure.

The UN Security Council unanimously imposed new sanctions on North Korea on Friday for its recent intercontinental ballistic missile test, seeking to limit its access to refined petroleum products and crude oil and its earnings from workers abroad.

The UN resolution seeks to ban nearly 90 per cent of refined petroleum exports to North Korea by capping them at 500,000 barrels a year and, in a last-minute change, demands the repatriation of North Koreans working abroad within 24 months, instead of 12 months as first proposed.

The US-drafted resolution also caps crude oil supplies to North Korea at 4 million barrels a year and commits the Council to further reductions if it were to conduct another nuclear test or launch another ICBM.

In a statement carried by the official KCNA news agency, North Korea's foreign ministry said the United States was terrified by its nuclear force and was getting "more and more frenzied in the moves to impose the harshest-ever sanctions and pressure on our country".

The new resolution was tantamount to a complete economic blockade of North Korea, the ministry said.

"We define this 'sanctions resolution' rigged up by the US and its followers as a grave infringement upon the sovereignty of our Republic, as an act of war violating peace and stability in the Korean peninsula and the region and categorically reject the 'resolution', it said.

"There is no more fatal blunder than the miscalculation that the US and its followers could check by already worn-out 'sanctions' the victorious advance of our people who have brilliantly accomplished the great historic cause of completing the state nuclear force", the ministry said.—Reuters ■

Rescuers search for Philippine storm victims as toll rises to 200

MANILA — Rescuers in the Philippines searched on Sunday for survivors of a storm that triggered floods and landslides and killed about 200 people, left scores missing and thousands homeless, most of whom apparently ignored warnings to move to safety.

Misery in the largely Christian Philippines was compounded by the death of at least 37 people in a shopping mall fire, officials said on Christmas Eve.

The Philippines is battered by about 20 typhoons a year and warnings are routinely issued, but the level of destruction wreaked by tropical storm Tembin on the southern island of Mindanao from late on Friday came as a surprise.

"The figure could increase as we continue to receive reports from the field as the weather improves," said a police spokesman on Mindanao, Superintendent Lemuel Gonda, referring to the death toll. "We are slowly restoring power and communications in affected areas."

Disaster officials said 159 people were listed as missing while about 70,000 had been forced from their homes.

Soldiers and police joined emergency workers and volunteers to search for survivors and victims, clear debris and restore power and communications.

Disaster officials said many villagers had ignored warnings to leave coastal areas and move away from riverbanks, and got swept away when flash floods and landslides struck.

The storm was moving west on Sunday, over some outlying Philippine islands and the South China Sea towards southern Viet Nam, at a speed of about 20 kph (12 mph).

It intensified into a typhoon with winds of 120 kph (75 mph) as it moved out of the Philippine area of responsibility, the national meteorological agency said.

The United Nations was ready to help the Philippines, a spokesman for UN Secretary-General Antonio Guterres said in a statement. Last week, 46 people were killed in the central Philippines when a typhoon hit. In 2013, super typhoon Haiyan killed nearly 8,000 people and left 200,000 families homeless.

The south of the Philippines has been plagued by insurgencies by communist rebels and Muslim separatists for years, as well as often bearing the brunt of tropical storms roaring in from the Pacific.

The region was hit by another disaster on the weekend when fire swept through a shopping mall in the city of Davao, killing at least 37 people, most of them workers at a call centre, city government officials said.—Reuters ■

China's first domestic large amphibious aircraft makes maiden flight

GUANGZHOU — China's first large amphibious aircraft AG600 on Sunday completed its maiden flight in south China's Guangdong Province

At 9:39 am, the aircraft AG600, code named "Kunlong" left Jinwan airport in the city of Zhuhai. The flight lasted about one hour.

"The maiden flight makes China among the few countries capable of developing a large amphibious aircraft," said Huang Lingcai, chief designer of AG600.

The Communist Party of China (CPC) Central Committee and the State Council congratulated all those engaged in the mission, including those from the Ministry of Industry and Information, the Civil Aviation Administration of China and the Aviation Industry Corporation of China.

The congratulatory message said that the maiden flight was a major breakthrough in developing special-purpose aircraft following the maiden flight of the large C919 passenger jet in May.

The 39.6-meter aircraft is powered by four domestically-built turboprop engines, according to its developer, the Aviation Industry Corporation of China (AVIC). With a maximum take-off weight of 53.5 tonnes and a top cruising speed of 500 kilometers per hour, the AG600 has a range of 12 hours.

Designed to be the world's largest amphibious aircraft, the AG600 will be mainly used for maritime rescue, fighting forest fires and marine monitoring.

It can carry 50 people during search-and-rescue missions, collect 12 tonnes of water in 20 seconds for fire fighting and transport up to 370 tonnes of water on a single tank of fuel.

Its name "Kunlong" stands for a high expectation in Chinese culture with the "Kun" meaning an enormous legendary fish and "Long" a dragon.

The AG600 is the third member of China's "large aircraft family" following the large freighter Y-20 and large passenger aircraft C919, which made maiden flights in 2013 and 2017. The Y-20 entered into service with China's airforce in July 2016.—Xinhua ■

Eating more tomatoes, fruits helps restore lung damage caused by smoking: study

SAN FRANCISCO — Smokers who quit smoking and live on a diet high in tomatoes and fruits, particularly apples, have better chances of restoring their lung functions impaired by smoking, a new study finds.

The study, published in the December issue of the European Respiratory Journal, said former smokers who eat more tomatoes and fresh fruits on a regular basis saw a slower natural decline in lung function over a 10-year period.

According to the study, conducted by the Johns Hopkins Bloomberg School of Public Health, adults who on average ate more than two tomatoes or more than three portions of fresh fruits and vegetables a day had a slower decline in lung function, compared to those who ate less than one tomato or less than one portion of fruits, respectively, on a daily basis. Lung function starts to decline at around age 30 and poor lung function is linked to higher risks of death from all diseases, including chronic obstructive pulmonary disease (COPD), heart disease and lung cancer.

"A diet rich in fruits can slow down the lung's natural aging process even if you have never smoked," said Vanessa Garcia-Larsen, the study's lead author, who is also an assistant professor in the Bloomberg School's Department of International Health.

Garcia-Larsen and her team examined diet and lung function of more than 650 adults from Germany, Norway and Britain in 2002 and performed lung function tests on the same group of participants 10 years later.

The researchers found a more striking diet-lung-function among former smokers, who had around 80 ml slower decline over the 10-year period because their diets were highly rich in tomatoes and fruits. Such a result suggests that the nutrients in their diets are beneficial to repairing the lung damage done by smoking. "Eating more fruits on a regular basis can help attenuate the decline as people age, and might even help repair damage caused by smoking," Garcia-Larsen said.—Xinhua ■

Circus owner sues Kid Rock for using 'Greatest Show On Earth' slogan

NEW YORK — The company that owns the Ringling Bros and Barnum & Bailey Circus, which for years had dubbed itself the "Greatest Show on Earth," filed a lawsuit accusing singer Kid Rock of using the slogan unlawfully.

Feld Entertainment, the production company that owns the longtime circus show and associated intellectual property, said in a lawsuit filed Friday that singer Robert Ritchie, known professionally as Kid Rock, and Live Nation Entertainment were infringing the circus' "celebrated and valuable" trademark by using the slogan on the singer's upcoming US concert tour without permission.

The company, in the lawsuit filed on Friday in US district court in Tampa, charged trademark dilution and infringement, unfair competition, injury to business reputation and unjust enrichment. "We have authorized licensees for Ringling Bros. and The Greatest Show On Earth, but Kid Rock is not one of them," Feld general counsel Lisa Joiner said in a Friday statement.

Among Feld's licensees are restaurant chain Chick-fil-A, telecommunications provider MetroPCS and nonprofit Easterseals, according to the lawsuit.

Representatives for Kid Rock and Live Nation did not immediately respond to requests for comment on Saturday.

The company said it had contacted Kid Rock and Live Nation repeatedly to ask that they stop using the slogan but was ignored.

The lawsuit asked the court to stop the unauthorized usage of the slogan in connection with Kid Rock's tour and merchandise, and award Feld profits derived from the slogan's use and triple unspecified damages.

In May, Feld Entertainment ended its storied Ringling Bros and Barnum & Bailey Circus show in New York after nearly 150 years of showcasing animals, clowns and acrobats to millions.

The finale came a year after the company bowed to pressure from animal rights activists and agreed to stop using elephants as its featured attraction in its performances, which it said affected ticket sales amid high operating costs.

Feld earned more than $50 million (£37.4 million) annually in the last five years from goods and services sold under the trademark, according to the lawsuit.

Kid Rock, who also included the concert slogan on his Twitter profile, will kick off his 2018 nationwide tour on 31 December in Kansas City, Missouri, according to his website.—Reuters ■

Miss America CEO, other leaders resign after report of derogatory emails

NEW YORK — The head of the organisation that stages the Miss America beauty pageant and other leaders with the group resigned on Saturday after a report this week alleging that emails he had sent were derogatory toward past winners.

Sam Haskell's resignation as executive chairman and chief executive of the Miss America Organization was accompanied by the departure of the organisation's president, the chairman of the board and a board member.

Haskell had been suspended on Friday, one day after a Huffington Post report about the internal emails.

The pageant has for years faced criticism that it objectifies women, and the scandal over the emails has led to renewed scrutiny of the annual event in Atlantic City, New Jersey.

"This afternoon, the board of directors of the Miss America Organization accepted the resignation of Executive Chairman and Chief Executive Officer Sam Haskell, effective immediately," Dan Meyers, interim chairman of the board, said in a statement.

Lynn Weidner, chairman of the 96-year-old organisation's board, also resigned but will remain on the board up to 90 days to ensure a smooth transition to new leadership, Meyers said.

Josh Randle, president and COO, is also stepping down but will remain in his position temporarily, a Miss America Organization spokesman said in a statement.—Reuters ■

Kane has Messi tally in sights after latest hat-trick

BURNLEY, (England) — Tottenham Hotspur striker Harry Kane could end 2017 as the top calendar year goalscorer in European football after hitting his seventh hat-trick of the year in Saturday’s 3-0 win at Burnley.

His manager Mauricio Pochettino believes he can not only reach that goal but has the capacity to get even better in the coming years. Kane’s triple means he has now scored 53 goals in all competitive games for club and country this year, leaving him just a goal behind Barcelona’s Argentine master Lionel Messi.

The England forward is level with Bayern Munich’s Polish forward Robert Lewandowski, Real Madrid’s Cristiano Ronaldo and Paris St Germain’s Edinson Cavani.

Unlike any of his rivals for the record, however, Kane still has a game left to play this year - a home game against Southampton on 26 December. Kane’s goals at Turf Moor also took his Premier League calendar year tally to 36, equaling Alan Shearer’s record from 1995. “He is amazing, a fantastic player; he needs one more to be above Alan, we will see in the next game. But it is fantastic for him,” said Pochettino.

“It’s difficult to find words to describe Harry Kane. Even during my time at Spurs I’m surprised by him.

The hat-trick is nice for him but we could have scored more than three. I’m worried when you don’t create chances though,” he said. Pochettino said Kane’s tally was just reward for the effort he has put into his game. —Reuters ■

Barcelona pile more misery on Real Madrid with 3-0 ‘Clasico’ win

MADRID — Barcelona exploited a lacklustre Real Madrid to win the ‘Clasico’ 3-0 on Saturday as goals from Luis Suarez, Lionel Messi and Aleix Vidal gave the Catalans a 3-0 win and moved them 14 points clear of their biggest rivals in La Liga.

Barca outplayed the champions in Real’s Santiago Bernabeu fortress to also extend their lead to nine points at the top over their nearest challengers Atletico Madrid, who were beaten 1-0 by Espanyol on Friday.

Barca’s weekend was made complete by third-placed Valencia then stumbling to a 1-0 defeat at home to Villarreal on Saturday which leaves them 11 points off the pace.

Real are 14 points adrift in fourth with a game in hand but their crushing defeat leaves their title hopes looking bleak, even though Barca’s coach Ernesto Valverde said afterwards it was premature to write off the champions. After a tense but tight first half in the early afternoon sun, Suarez put Barca ahead, capitalising on a wide open space in Madrid’s midfield to knock in a simple pass from Sergi Roberto following a breakaway move in the 54th minute. Messi hammered in the second goal from the penalty spot 20 minutes later after Dani Carvajal was sent off for blocking a goal-bound header from Paulinho with his arm after Real were again easily picked apart on the counter attack. Catalan defender turned winger Vidal hit the third in injury time to pile more misery on Madrid, who looked unrecognisable from the side that crushed Barca 5-1 on aggregate in the Spanish Super Cup in August.

Real failed to capitalise on their chances in the first half as Karim Benzema’s header came off the post and Cristiano Ronaldo was denied by the flailing leg of Barca goalkeeper Marc-Andre ter Stegen.

However, the European champions collapsed after the interval and Barca took full advantage. “We are feeling very angry because it’s a defeat that hurts a lot but we are not going to give up,” Real coach Zinedine Zidane told a news conference. —Reuters ■
